The Analysis of Stochastic Processes using GLIM James K.

Lindsey, 2012-12-06 The aim of this book is to present a survey of the many ways in which the statistical package GLIM may be used to model and analyze stochastic processes Its emphasis is on using GLIM interactively to apply statistical techniques and examples are drawn from a wide range of applications including medicine biology and the social sciences It is based on the author's many years of teaching courses along these lines to both undergraduate and graduate students The author assumes that readers have a reasonably strong background in statistics such as might be gained from undergraduate courses and that they are also familiar with the basic workings of GLIM Topics covered include the analysis of survival data regression and fitting distributions time series analysis including both the time and frequency domains repeated measurements and generalized linear models

An Introduction to Categorical Data Analysis Alan Agresti, 2018-10-11

A valuable new edition of a standard reference The use of statistical methods for categorical data has increased dramatically particularly for applications in the biomedical and social sciences An Introduction to Categorical Data Analysis Third Edition summarizes these methods and shows readers how to use them using software Readers will find a unified generalized linear models approach that connects logistic regression and loglinear models for discrete data with normal regression for continuous data Adding to the value in the new edition is Illustrations of the use of R software to perform all the analyses in the book A new chapter on alternative methods for categorical data including smoothing and regularization methods such as the lasso classification methods such as linear discriminant analysis and classification trees and cluster analysis New sections in many chapters introducing the Bayesian approach for the methods of that chapter More than 70 analyses of data sets to illustrate application of the methods and about 200 exercises many containing other data sets An appendix showing how to use SAS Stata and SPSS and an appendix with short solutions to most odd numbered exercises Written in an applied nontechnical style this book illustrates the methods using a wide variety of real data including medical clinical trials environmental questions drug use by teenagers horseshoe crab mating basketball shooting correlates of happiness and much more An Introduction to Categorical Data Analysis Third Edition is an invaluable tool for statisticians and biostatisticians as well as methodologists in the social and behavioral sciences medicine and public health marketing education and the biological and agricultural sciences

Scholl, 1990      A Nonparametric Analysis of Plot Basal Area Growth Using Tree Based Models Gary L. Gadbury, 1998

Tree based statistical models can be used to investigate data structure and predict future observations We used nonparametric and nonlinear models to reexamine the data sets on tree growth used by Bechtold et al 1991 and Ruark et al 1991 The growth data were collected by Forest Inventory and Analysis FIA teams from 1962 to 1972 4th cycle and 1972 to 1982 5th cycle We used tree based models to group observations into clusters that were specified by covariate values Next we performed a permutation test on the grouped data to test for a change in tree growth rates from the 4th cycle to the 5th cycle Our techniques differed from those used by Bechtold et al 1991 and Ruark et al 1991 The data was not assumed to follow any parametric distribution the relation between response and covariates was not assumed to be linear and the test for a change in tree growth did not require any parametric assumptions The methodology presented here is general and applicable to other situations where the significance of a specific covariate is in question Despite these relaxed constraints of analysis our results generally agreed with those of Bechtold et al and Ruark et al      Vegetation of the Glacier Lakes Ecosystem Experiments Site Claudia M.
