Object in the Middle Ages Ittai Weinryb, 2016-04-18 This book presents the first full length study in English of monumental bronzes in the Middle Ages Taking as its point of departure the common medieval reception of bronze sculpture as living or animated the study closely analyzes the practice of lost wax casting cire perdue in western Europe and explores the cultural responses to large scale bronzes in the Middle Ages Starting with mining smelting and the production of alloys and ending with automata water clocks and fountains the book uncovers networks of meaning around which bronze sculptures were produced and consumed The book is a path breaking contribution to the study of metalwork in the Middle Ages and to the re evaluation of medieval art more broadly presenting an understudied body of work to reconsider what the materials and techniques embodied in public monuments meant to the medieval spectator Claes Oldenburg Pasadena Art Museum (Pasadena), 1971 The New Monuments and the End of Man Robert Slifkin, 2019-11-05 How leading American artists reflected on the fate of humanity in the nuclear era through monumental sculpture In the wake of the atomic bombings of Japan in 1945 artists in the United States began to question what it meant to create a work of art in a world where humanity could be rendered extinct by its own hand The New Monuments and the End of Man examines how some of the most important artists of postwar America revived the neglected tradition of the sculptural monument as a way to grapple with the cultural and existential anxieties surrounding the threat of nuclear annihilation Robert Slifkin looks at such iconic works as the industrially evocative welded steel sculptures of David Smith the austere structures of Donald Judd and the desolate yet picturesque earthworks of Robert Smithson Transforming how we understand this crucial moment in American art he traces the intersections of postwar sculptural practice with cybernetic theory science fiction cinema and literature and the political debates surrounding nuclear warfare Slifkin identifies previously unrecognized affinities of the sculpture of the 1940s and 1950s with the minimalism and land art of the 1960s and 1970s and acknowledges the important contributions of postwar artists who have been marginalized until now such as Raoul Hague Peter Grippe and Robert Mallery Strikingly illustrated throughout The New Monuments and the End of Man spans the decades from Hiroshima to the Fall of Saigon when the atomic bomb cast its shadow over American art Catalogue of manuscripts and other objects in the museum of the Public record office, with notes by sir H.C.M. commitment to familiar objects has shaped accounts of his career but his associations with Pop art and postwar consumerism have overshadowed another crucial aspect of his work In this revealing reassessment Katherine Smith traces Oldenburg's profound responses to shifting urban conditions framing his enduring relationship with the city as a critical perspective and conceiving his art as urban theory Smith argues that Oldenburg adapted lessons of context gleaned from New York's changing cityscape in the late 1950s to large scale objects and architectural plans By examining disparate projects from New York to Los Angeles she situates Oldenburg's innovations in local geographies and national debates In doing so Smith illuminates patterns of urbanization through the important contributions of one of the leading artists in the United States
