

of precipitation as a fact has been brought up very prominently. I may further digress to say that no amount of precipitations, however clear of doubt and fixed as to time, place, and outward method, would have the slightest effect on my mind or action unless my own intuition and inner senses confirmed them and showed them to be from a source which should call for my attention and concurrence.

How, then, is this precipitation done, and what is the process? This question brings up the whole of the philosophy offered in the Secret Doctrine. For if the postulate of the metaphysical character of the Cosmos is denied, if the supreme power of the disciplined mind is not admitted, if the actual existence of an inner and real world is negatived, if the necessity and power of the image-making faculty are disallowed, then such precipitation is an impossibility, always was, and always will be. Power over mind, matter, space, and time depends on several things and positions. Needed for this are: Imagination raised to its highest limit, desire combined with will that wavers not, and a knowledge of the occult chemistry of Nature. All must be present or there will be no result.

Imagination is the power to make in the ether an image. This faculty is limited by any want of the training of mind and increased by good mental development. In ordinary persons imagination is only a vain and fleeting fancy which makes but a small impression comparatively in the ether. This power, when well-trained, makes a matrix in ether wherein each line, word, letter, sentence, color, or other mark is firmly and definitely made. Will, well-trained, must then be used to draw from the ether the matter to be deposited, and then, according to the laws of such an operation, the depositing matter collects in masses within the limits of the matrix and becomes from its accumulation visible on the surface selected. The will, still at work, has then to cut off the mass of matter from its attraction to that from whence it came. This is the whole operation, and who then is the wher? Those learned in the schools laugh, and well they may, for there is not in science anything to correspond, and many of the positions laid down are contrary to several received opinions. But in Nature there are vast numbers of natural effects produced by ways wholly unknown to science, and Nature does not mind the laughter, nor should any disciple.

But how is it possible to inject such a precipitation into a closed letter? The ether is all-pervading, and the envelope or any other material bar is no bar to it. In it is carried the matter to be deposited, and as the whole operation is done on the other side of visible nature up to the actual appearance of the deposit, physical obstructions do not make the slightest difference.

It is necessary to return for a moment to the case of precipitations through mediums. Here the matrix needs no trained imagination to make it nor trained will to hold it. In the astral light the impressions are cut and remain immovable; these are used by the elementals and other forces at work, and no disturbing will of sitter being able to interfere—simply from blind ignorance—there is no disturbance of the automatic unconscious work. In the sitter's aura are thousands of impressions which remain unmoved because all attention has been long ago withdrawn. And the older or simpler they are the more firmly do they exist. These constitute also a matrix through which the nature spirits work.

I can properly finish this with the incident mentioned at the beginning. It was with H.P.B. I was sitting in her room beside her, the distance between us being some four feet. In my hand I held a book she never had had in her possession and that I had just taken from the mail. It was clear of all marks, its title page was fresh and clean, no one had touched it since it left the bookseller. I examined its pages and began to read. In about five minutes a very powerful current of what felt like electricity ran up and down my side on the skin, and I looked up at her. She was looking at me and said "What do you read?" I had forgotten the title, as it was one I had never seen before, and so I turned back to the title page. There at the top on the margin where it had not been before was a sen-

Occult Phenomena:

On the Psychology and Pathology of So-Called Occult Phenomena Carl Jung, 2024-05-09 Jung's 1902 work On the Psychology and Pathology of the So-called Occult Phenomena originally titled Zur Psychologie und Pathologie sogenannter occulter Phänomene represents his earliest foray into professional psychology. The monograph demonstrates Jung's formative engagement with the human psyche through the lens of mediumship and trance states, a topic that positioned him at the intersection of psychiatry, parapsychology, and the study of unconscious processes. This essay contextualizes Jung's work within the scientific and cultural milieu of the time, explores his methodological innovations, and analyzes his conclusions, which prefigured many of his later theoretical developments. This modern edition provides a fresh, accessible translation of Carl Jung's early scientific writings originally intended for an academic audience. The translation is accompanied by a thought-provoking afterword by the translator, which explores the philosophical foundations, historical context, and lasting impact of Jung's ideas from his early clinical work under Freud to his later metaphysical philosophy, such as Aion and Synchronicity, and situates this work within the broader framework of Jung's intellectual and clinical development. Supplemental materials, including a detailed timeline of Jung's life and work, further contextualize his theories within their personal, cultural, and historical dimensions. This is one of Jung's first publications and already shows an advanced understanding of phenomenology and neurology. Jung covers a wide range of psychic phenomena and their connection to known clinical psychological practices, including somnambulism and cryptomnesia. This work can be compared with Kant's 1766 Dreams of a Ghost Seer Explained by Dreams of Metaphysics or Schopenhauer's Attempt on Spirit Seeing and What is Connected with it. Jung writes here: "My main aim has been contrary to public opinion, which has nothing but a contemptuous smile for the so-called occult phenomena, to show the numerous connections between them and the field of experience of the physician and of psychology, and to point out the many important questions which this unexplored field still holds for us." Jung's study of the occult represents a bold and innovative attempt to understand the unconscious through the lens of dissociation and symbolism. By treating psychic states as meaningful psychological phenomena rather than dismissing them as mere pathology or fraud, Jung laid the groundwork for a new approach to the study of the psyche. This early work reveals the seeds of ideas that would later blossom into his groundbreaking theories, solidifying his reputation as a pioneering thinker who embraced the full complexity of human experience. Jung's refusal to dismiss occult phenomena out of hand also challenged the rigid materialism of the scientific establishment. His approach, while grounded in empirical observation, left room for the mystery and depth of human experience, bridging the gap between scientific psychology and the humanistic search for meaning.
