

Occupational Ghettos

- Gender typed occupational ghettos find women in less desirable jobs nonmanual (sales, service, clerical)---hypersegregation
- Segregation studied most extreme in egalitarian, family friendly policy countries (Sweden, Norway). Compatibility of egalitarian ideals with essentialist beliefs where nonmanual work “default” home for part-timing women/mothers
- Segregation regimes have logics: vertical segregation (men up/women down) of women in subordinate manual/nonmanual sectors due to logic of male primacy that represents men as more status worthy than women; horizontal segregation maintained through logic of gender essentialism (men/women have different tastes, capacities: women better at nonmanual service, men better at manual, Charles & Grusky)
- Gender essentialism seen in deconstruction of emotional labor of jobs (service friendly, litigators mean); authority=male, deference “nice”=female; expectation of women as emotional managers affirming, enhancing, celebrating well-being of others (Hochschild)

Occupational Ghettos:

Occupational Ghettos Maria Charles,David B. Grusky,2004 Women in the industrialized world now form a major part of the labour force and yet they typically work in female occupational ghettos and segregated firms This study raises crucial questions about how and why this has taken place identifying the dynamics at work

Breaking Out of the Pink-Collar

Ghetto Sharon H. Mastracci,2016-07-22 Widely interdisciplinary in appeal this book reports on the successes of innovative training opportunities for non college women who end up in low paying low mobility pink collar jobs The author examines the relative effectiveness of various programs in helping these women gain access to high wage high mobility employment opportunities The analysis includes case studies of grant funded projects as well as in depth statistical analysis using ten years of data on women throughout the United States These types of education and training options are in tremendous demand and the author finds that they are having a powerful impact on the job prospects of non college women As an integral part of her study she spells out what kinds of programs have proven most and least effective Breaking Out of the Pink Collar Ghetto addresses vital issues concerning the effects of gender segregation in career counseling and employment and training policy It provides much needed guidance on employment and training services delivery The book has wide application for students as well as professionals in the fields of public policy and public administration educational counseling and vocational education labor economics and women s studies

Class, Race, and Gender in American Education

Lois Weis,1988-07-08 Most educators might agree that the hidden agendas on class race and gender to a large extent condition and determine the form and the content of schooling But how much of this situation is due to school factors and how much to social background factors is heatedly discussed and debated by scholars working within both the mainstream and critical traditions in the field of education Class Race and Gender in American Education represents a groundbreaking overview of current issues and contemporary approaches involved in the areas of class race and gender in American education In this book the first to combine a consideration of these issues and to investigate the manner in which they connect in the school experience authors consider the particular situations of males and females of divergent racial and class backgrounds from their earliest childhood experiences through the adult university years While providing valuable original in depth ethnographic and statistical analyses the volume also incorporates some of the important current theoretical debates the debate between structuralists and culturalists is highlighted for example

Too Few Women at the Top

Kumiko Nemoto,2016-09-15 The number of women in positions of power and authority in Japanese companies has remained small despite the increase in the number of educated women and the passage of legislation on gender equality In Too Few Women at the Top Kumiko Nemoto draws on theoretical insights regarding Japan s coordinated capitalism and institutional stasis to challenge claims that the surge in women s education and employment will logically lead to the decline of gender inequality and eventually improve women s status in the Japanese workplace Nemoto s interviews with diverse groups of workers at three Japanese financial companies and two cosmetics companies in Tokyo reveal the persistence of vertical sex segregation as a cost saving measure by Japanese companies. Women's advancement is impeded by customs including seniority pay and promotion track based hiring of women long working hours and the absence of women leaders. Nemoto contends that an improvement in gender equality in the corporate system will require that Japan fundamentally depart from its postwar methods of business management. Only when the static labor market is revitalized through adoption of new systems of cost savings employee hiring and rewards will Japanese women advance in their chosen professions. Comparison with the situation in the United States makes the author's analysis of the Japanese case relevant for understanding the dynamics of the glass ceiling in U.S. workplaces as well.

Working Class Without Work Lois Weis, 2013-10-15 The author explores issues of race, class, and gender among white working class youths and she considers the roles of school and family in the production of the self. The book also examines the working class teens' attitudes toward and readiness for postfeminist thinking and the emerging American New Right. Presenting the first sustained ethnographic investigation of white working class youth in the context of deindustrialization, Weis offers a complex portrait of how these young people produce themselves in a society vastly different from that of their parents and grandparents.

Inclusion in Tourism Susan Slocum, 2023-04-13 Inclusion in Tourism provides examples of discrimination and marginalisation in tourism practices and avenues designed to recognise and overcome personal or institutional biases, setting a road map for researchers interested in establishing a more inclusive approach to tourism and tourism research. Logically structured multidisciplinary in approach and compiled by a well-known scholar and leader in tourism theory, this volume comprises 13 specially commissioned chapters that provide concrete global examples of overcoming discrimination within tourism institutions centred around examples of best practice, courses of action and positive outcomes. Chapters outline, explain and challenge the existing view of tourism theory as inclusionary, destroying the myth that tourism is an equal opportunity endeavour, bringing a new level of scrutiny to stand alone concepts of discrimination and marginalisation as a long existing phenomenon in tourism studies. The book begins with an institutionalised and global approach to discrimination focusing on immigration policy, academic teaching, research grant policies and destination image in relation to minorities and xenophobia. The text then moves to the individual level discussing aspects of institutionalised discrimination based on individual characteristics such as sexual orientation, obesity, disability and gender. International in scope, this book will be of pivotal interest to graduate students, researchers and practitioners interested in diversity and inclusion.

The Black Ghetto Harold M. Rose, 1971 Narrowing the Gender Wage Gap Stephen Shamie, 1986 From the Introduction After considering the wage gap and some earnings statistics this paper will examine the experiences with the concept of equal value in Europe, the United States and Canada. Then the concept will be discussed in reference to the equality section of the Charter. Finally a number of arguments will be advanced against equal value legislation. These arguments are based on the theory that equal value is an impractical and unworkable concept and will accomplish very little in the struggle for women's rights. What is really needed to advance the women's cause is a significant strengthening of Ontario's equal employment opportunity programs which would give women the chance to gain both better wages and better jobs as well as vigorous enforcement of existing equal pay laws. The Ghetto Louis Wirth, 1928 Avant-garde Writers and the Jewish Question Amy Feinstein, 2001 Women in the Administrative Revolution Graham S.
