Man Induced Land Subsidence:

Man-Induced Land Subsidence Thomas L. Holzer, 1984-01-01     Man-induced Land Subsidence Thomas L. Holzer, 1984 Land subsidence has been caused by man's activities in at least 37 of the 50 states of the United States and affects more than 40 000 square kilometres in this country alone. Data from a few sites where economic impact is documented suggest a total annual cost to the nation of more than 100 million worldwide. The total economic impact is astounding and growing. These nine papers constitute a major contribution to measuring and understanding this problem and are arranged in 3 categories: fluid withdrawal from porous media, drainage of organic soil and collapse into man-made and natural cavities.

Subsidence in the United States, 1991-01-15     Numerical Analysis and Modelling in Geomechanics John W. Bull, 2003-09-02 In geomechanics existing design methods are very much dependent upon sophisticated on-site techniques to assess ground conditions. This book describes numerical analysis, computer simulation and modelling that can be used to answer some highly complex questions associated with geomechanics. The contributors, who are all international experts in the field, also give insights into the future directions of these methods. Numerical Analysis and Modelling in Geomechanics will appeal to professional engineers involved in designing and building both onshore and offshore structures where geomechanical considerations may well be outside the usual codes of practice and therefore specialist advice is required. Postgraduate researchers and degree students carrying out project work in this area will also find the book an invaluable resource.

Multi Hazard Identification and Risk Assessment, 1997     Hydrology of Disasters V.P. Singh, 2012-12-06 The General Assembly of the United Nations passed a resolution on December 11 1987 designating the 1990s as the International Decade for Natural Disaster Reduction. This resolution has served as a catalyst in promotion of international cooperation in the field of natural disaster reduction in initiation of wide ranging research activities on natural and man-made disasters, in development of technologies for assessment, prediction, prevention and mitigation through technical assistance, technology transfer, demonstration projects and education and training, and in dissemination of information related to measures for assessment, prediction, prevention and mitigation of natural disasters. Disasters are manifestations of environmental extremes. Depending upon the type of disasters, their occurrence may have short term and/or long term detrimental environmental consequences. Disasters cannot be prevented altogether but their impact can be mitigated. This book is an attempt to provide a discussion of hydrological aspects of the various types of natural disasters. It is hoped that others will be stimulated to write more comprehensive texts on this subject of enormous importance.

Site Characterization in Karst and Pseudokarst Terrains Richard C. Benson, Lynn B. Yuhr, 2015-09-24 This book provides a practical strategy for obtaining a more complete and accurate geologic site characterization. The strategy and methods to characterize complex geologic settings are readily available. The strategy utilizes readily available technology, basic science and good old fashioned common sense resulting in a solid understanding of geologic and even karst or pseudokarst conditions. We provide an introduction to many off the shelf methods available for site characterization as well as examples of their application throughout the book. The purpose of a geologic site characterization is to understand the 3 dimensional geologic framework along with the engineering and hydrologic properties of a site including any man made impacts. A well done site characterization is the cornerstone of all geotechnical, groundwater and environmental projects. The geologic conditions particularly karst conditions can significantly impact a site including its structural stability, groundwater pathways and potential for rapid transport or traps for contaminants. Once we have adequately characterized the geologic conditions can we carry our remediation design and construction model flow and make risk assessments that are accurate and reliable.

Human Activity and Environmental Processes K. J. Gregory, Des E. Walling, 1987-05-06 This new edition of the acclaimed Man and Environmental Processes comprised of chapters contributed by internationally respected researchers reviews the effect of human activity on the entire range of environmental processes. Provides extensive up to date coverage of human influence upon processes in the hydrosphere, atmosphere, biosphere and geosphere and how it relates to questions of management. Material from the first edition has been substantially updated and revised and four new chapters have been added which provide introductory coverage of the theme of human activity and environmental processes in oceans and lakes and African vegetation and desertification.

Humans as Geologic Agents Judy Ehlen, William C. Haneberg, Robert A. Larson, 2005-01-01

Environmental Geology Lawrence Lundgren, 1999 Designed for courses which deal with geology and environmental policy and environmental decisions usually called environmental geology but taught at a more sophisticated level than the usual freshman nonscience level course in environmental geology. The text's purpose is to emphasize the importance of seeing environmental geology as a scientific field demanding steadily increasing attention to interaction with other disciplines and understanding how environmental geology is shaped by the needs imposed by environmental policy and how it can help to shape environmental decisions.

Mojave Desert, 1994 Bulletin, 1989 Engineering Geology in Washington, 1989 Bulletin Washington (State). Division of Geology and Earth Resources, 1989 Bibliography and Index of Geology, 1991 The Publishers' Trade List Annual, 1985 Geomorphology in Environmental Management

Ronald U. Cooke, John Charles Doornkamp, 1990 This book should prove of value to all students taking courses in geomorphology particularly those with an emphasis on practical applications as well as to engineers, geologists, professional geomorphologists and environmental managers in all fields.
