Matrix Metalloproteinases In The Central Nervous System:

Matrix Metalloproteinases In The Central Nervous System Katherine Conant, Paul E Gottschall, 2005-07-26 This book presents the reader with an understanding of the role played by matrix metalloproteinases MMPs in the normal and diseased central nervous system CNS These enzymes may be important to brain development and may also contribute to tissue destruction which is observed with inflammatory and degenerative conditions of the brain The book provides a background on the biology of MMPs and on the stimuli and conditions that are linked to an increase in their production and activity It describes the targets of MMPs which include matrix proteins such as collagen soluble cytokines and chemokines and cell surface receptors Studies implicating MMPs in neuronal process outgrowth and cell migration in CNS development are covered The book also touches on studies suggesting that in certain situations dysregulated MMP activity and or production may be critical to blood brain barrier breakdown and neuronal damage a Matrix Metalloproteinases in the Equine Central Nervous System Cristina Sogaro Robinson, 2007 Abstract Many diseases of the central nervous system share common pathophysiological processes such as disruption of the blood brain barrier BBB remodeling of the extracellular matrix ECM inflammation and oxidative stress In the last two decades it has become evident that matrix metalloproteinases MMPs play an essential role in many of these processes Several studies have focused on the regulation and expression of these proteases in experimental models of neurologic diseases revealing that inhibition of MMPs in early stages of disease has the potential to reduce the extent of damage to nervous tissue and improve functional neurologic recovery Research is currently focusing on defining the role of MMP in specific neurologic conditions to determine whether MMP inhibitors would be appropriate in clinical settings Selective MMP inhibitors are currently used in research settings However commonly used drugs such as corticosteroids and tetracyclines are non selective MMPs inhibitors which are used in horses with neurologic disease These drugs may alter the outcome of said disease by modification of MMP activity This first part of this work a review of MMP role in central nervous system diseases has been made in attempt to translate some of the knowledge from human and laboratory species to the equine species and explore possible treatment options in horses affected by neurologic diseases In the second part we evaluated MMP 9 activity in the CSF of 40 horses affected by neurologic diseases On gelatin zymography all horses had low but present MMP 9 activity Bacterial Infections of the Central Nervous System Karen L.
