Measurement Of Sensation:

The Measurement of Sensation Donald Richard John Laming, 1997 The publication in 1957 of S S Stevens famous paper On the psychophysical law ignited a controversy which has continued ever since relating to people s subjective judgements of physical reality Why is it that the perception of sensation can diverge so sharply from the magnitude of the stimulus How should sensation be measured Donald Laming brings together a diversity of ideas and a wealth of experimental evidence and provides a challenging new perspective on the question which has fragmented the research community for nearly 40 years The Measurement of Sensation C. Quantitative Psychology and Measurement: Revived and Novel Perspectives on Fundamental Problems Jana Uher, Jan Ketil Arnulf, Barbara Hanfstaengl, 2025-11-14 Psychology's continued crises in replicability, validity, generalisability, and thus confidence in its findings are currently attributed primarily to questionable research practices (QRPs) e.g. p-hacking, HARKing, cherry-picking. Popular pertinent debates therefore centre on proposals for remedying inappropriate method applications e.g. larger samples, robust statistics, pre-registration, replication. Replicable, non-random effects of psychological interventions and differentiations between individuals are essential for applied purposes. But current approaches to replicability, validity, and psychometric modelling are merely pragmatic, providing evidence of just utility to discriminate well and consistently between cases and in ways considered important e.g. social relevance, relations to future outcomes. Yet without understanding the study phenomena in themselves e.g. individuals' experience, beliefs, thought processes, and without elaborating how relevant features of them can be made amenable to quantitative investigation, and if at all, the quantity objection, the actual causes of replicable quantitative findings cannot be explored. These causes, however, may be completely unrelated to the actual study phenomena e.g. methodomorphism. This concerns in particular the attributes and latent constructs studied in psychology, given that these are theoretical and statistical concepts that are attributed and construed as means of investigation and that only refer to but do not constitute the actual study phenomena in themselves. We believe the currently debated deficiencies of quantitative practices in psychology are just surface symptoms, whereas fundamental problems e.g. the inappropriateness of statistical assumptions for psychical phenomena and the actual root causes underlying psychology's crises and disputes around its scientific status are still hardly addressed. With this Research Topic, we want to give new impetus to critical debates on the epistemological and methodological foundations of quantitative methods and measurement in psychology, including problems long known but still hardly considered. Examples are: The behavioural and psychical phenomena's non-ergodicity rendering sample-level statistics uninformative about individual-level phenomena; Psychometricians' alignment of results to statistical theories rather than to features of the study phenomena, biasing inferences on the latter; Ideas that laypeople's intuitive judgements could reveal quantitative structures in complex, largely unobservable phenomena; The still unsupported claim that psychical phenomena could have quantitative properties at all and could thus be measured; The fact that psychometric structures shown for verbal item judgements can also be produced by semantic and Artificial Intelligence (AI) algorithms e.g. ChatGPT without collecting any empirical data. Still, most quantitative psychologists seem fairly unconcerned about the strong reliance on everyday language e.g. in ratings scales, and the imprecise concepts of psychological measurement, perhaps because their consequences do not become as straightforwardly apparent as in other disciplines such as in physics, chemistry, and medicine, where imprecise measurement can entail the collapse of buildings, chemical explosions, or drug overdoses. But where does the loose jargon around measurement variables and psychometrics go seriously wrong in psychology These and further contradictions problems and challenges underlying established quantitative practices in psychology must be addressed to tackle the discipline's continued crises and to develop new approaches that are needed to advance psychology as a science We invite from all fields contributions that critically explore and open up new perspectives on the foundations of quantification and measurement in psychology including perspectives still hardly considered e.g. qualitative mathematics complex dynamic systems fuzzy systems modelling machine learning We are also interested in methods for generating quantitative data either executed by persons e.g. time based observations computer based coding or by automated technology e.g. ecological momentary monitoring life logging reality mining However other than commonly done we are explicitly not seeking proposals for improving specific techniques of data analysis e.g. statistical or latent variable models Instead our focus is on making explicit and scrutinising the implicitly underlying rationales and fundamental principles thus the theory philosophy and methodology on which quantitative research in psychology currently is or should be built in the future This also includes critical views on whether or not quantitative investigations are meaningful at all for a science exploring behaviour mind and society and thus also contributions to the psychology sociology and philosophy of science in this field

Experimental Psychology: Quantitative experiments: pt. 1. Students' manual. pt. 2. Instructor's manual Edward Bradford Titchener, 1905 The general purpose with which this book has been written is sufficiently indicated by its title I have selected a number of the classical experiments of Experimental Psychology and have tried to present them in such a way that their performance shall have a real disciplinary value for the undergraduate student Within this general purpose my aim has been two fold I have sought to show in the first place that psychology is above the laboratory that we employ our instruments of precision not for their own sake but solely because they help us to a refined and more accurate introspection And secondly just as in my Outline of Psychology and Primer of Psychology I gave the results of experimentation a prominent place in the psychological system so here I have treated the selected experiments not as separate exercises but as points of departure for systematic discussion

Transactions of the Illuminating Engineering Society Illuminating Engineering Society, 1917 Measuring Utility Ivan Moscati, 2019 Utility is a key concept in the economics of individual decision making However utility is not measurable in a straightforward way As a result from the very beginning there has been debates about the meaning of utility as well as how to measure it This book is an innovative investigation of how these arguments changed over time Measuring Utility reconstructs economists ideas and discussions about utility measurement from 1870 to 1985 as well as their attempts to measure utility empirically The book brings into focus the interplay between the evolution of utility analysis economists ideas about utility measurement and their conception of what measurement in general means It also explores the relationships between the history of utility measurement in economics the history of the measurement of sensations in psychology and the history of measurement theory in general Finally the book discusses some methodological problems related to utility measurement such as the epistemological status of the utility concept and its measures The first part covers the period 1870 1910 and discusses the issue of utility measurement in the theories of Jevons Menger Walras and other early utility theorists Part II deals with the emergence of the notions of ordinal and cardinal utility during the period 1900 1945 and discusses two early attempts to give an empirical content to the notion of utility Part III focuses on the 1945 1955 debate on utility measurement that was originated by von Neumann and Morgenstern s expected utility theory EUT Part IV reconstructs the experimental attempts to measure the utility of money between 1950 and 1985 within the framework provided by EUT This historical and epistemological overview provides keen insights into current debates about rational choice theory and behavioral economics in the theory of individual decision making and the philosophy of economics
