

Full house, three-of-a-kind and some jokers

Boy, oh boy, oh boy! If you've seen one of these brothers, you've seen them all

By THOMAS PUGH
and MARTIN GOTTLIB

A red Volvo came to a stop in front of the corner ranch house on 160th Ave. in Howard Beach, Queens, and a strapping, dark-eyed, oval-faced, curly haired teenager got out.

He was followed by a strapping, dark-eyed, oval-faced, curly haired teenager, who was followed by another strapping, dark-eyed, oval-faced, curly haired teenager.

"Is this where the interviews are going to take place?" asked a reporter, motioning to the house.

"No speak English," said the first of the trio.

"No speak English," said the second of the trio.

You know what the third said.

IN OTHER WORDS, yesterday was shaping up as a typical weekend afternoon at the Kellman residence, where Queens College freshman David Kellman, 19, who has been conversant in English for at least the last 17 years, was playing host to the two youths who are believed to be his long lost identical brothers, Eddy Galland of New Hyde Park, L.I., and Robert Shafran of Scarsdale.

According to hospital records, the three were born on the same day—July 12, 1961—at Long Island Jewish-Hillside Medical Center and were released to an adoption agency within a month.

Shafran and Galland said they were reunited with the help of a mutual friend earlier this month. Kellman saw their picture in the newspaper and the duo became a trio.

AMONG THE crowd at the Kellman house yesterday were a host of TV, magazine and newspaper reporters and an agent named Jack Solomon, who directed traffic and at one point bounced out a People magazine writer who asked what Solomon felt were unfair questions.

THE APPARENT triplets already have appeared on the "Today" show and in scores of newspapers. Solomon is there to steer their future course, which, after their material is sharpened, may follow that of the Marx brothers.

"What kind of hopes do you have now?" asked one reporter.

"To pose as Gerber babies," replied Robert.

"What's life been like since you were reunited, Eddy?" the reporter asked David, not realizing that the three had shifted positions while he opened the door for a photographer.

Meanwhile they drank lots of apple cider and belted down cookies and lagers.

"How's it feel to have three brothers?" Joel Shafran, 12, Robert's adopted brother was asked.

He just rolled his eyes as if to say, "It's gonna be hectic."

RICHARD LEE GALT/REX
