Learn Chinese from 37 Characters Yong Chun Zhong, Richard Zhong, 2016-07-29 Dr Zhong has invented a new and fun way to learn how to pronounce all Chinese characters without using any alien phonetic symbols such as pinyin. Using conversations, proverbs, songs, and stories as examples, Dr Zhong also demonstrates how easily to master the 37 Chinese characters used as the phonetic notation in this book while providing a practical learning strategy to satisfy your individual learning need. Drawing from his own experiences in teaching and speaking bilingually, Dr Zhong makes learning this popular but complex language much easier than using conventional methods and allows the learner to independently explore the intrinsic harmony of the Chinese language. A breakthrough in teaching and learning the Chinese language. With only 37 commonly used Chinese characters, you can easily work out the pronunciation of any Chinese character. You will be able to learn both the pronunciation and the meaning of Chinese words at the same time by focusing on written Chinese. It is revealed that every Chinese character is phonetically related to other characters, allowing direct trial and error learning. A truly generative learning method to master Chinese independently. The character-based phonetic notation is as natural as the phonetic indicators originally used to create the majority of Chinese characters. For the first time, a practical learning strategy will enable you to plan which Chinese characters should be studied at any stage. By using the 2,500 commonly used characters selected in this book, you will be able to read aloud and understand over 98% of the content in Chinese publications.

Chinese Characters Nina Train Choa, 2008 Presents a selection of commonly used Chinese characters, including radicals, people, and body parts, plants, and nature, and objects, and explaining what each character means and how they reflect Chinese culture and history.

The Chinese Written Character as a Medium for Poetry Ernest Fenollosa, Ezra Pound, Jonathan Stalling, Lucas Klein, 2009-08-25. First published in 1919 by Ezra Pound. Ernest Fenollosa's essay on the Chinese written language has become one of the most often quoted statements in the history of American poetics. As edited by Pound, it presents a powerful conception of language that continues to shape our poetic and stylistic preferences. The idea that poems consist primarily of images, the idea that the sentence form with active verb mirrors relations of natural force. But previous editions of the essay represent Pound's understanding; it is fair to say his appropriation of the text. Fenollosa's manuscripts in the Beinecke Library of Yale University allow us to see this essay in a different light as a document of early sustained cultural interchange between North America and East Asia. Pound's editing of the essay obscured two important features; here restored to view. Fenollosa's encounter with Tendai Buddhism and Buddhist ontology and his concern with the dimension of sound in Chinese poetry. This book is the definitive critical edition of Fenollosa's important work. After a substantial Introduction, the text as edited by Pound is presented together with his notes and plates At the heart of the edition is the first full publication of the essay as Fenollosa wrote it accompanied by the many diagrams characters and notes Fenollosa and Pound scrawled on the verso pages Pound's deletions insertions and alterations to Fenollosa's sometimes ornate prose are meticulously captured enabling readers to follow the quasi dialogue between Fenollosa and his posthumous editor Earlier drafts and related talks reveal the development of Fenollosa's ideas about culture poetry and translation Copious multilingual annotation is an important feature of the edition This masterfully edited book will be an essential resource for scholars and poets and a starting point for a renewed discussion of the multiple sources of American modernist poetry

If Babel Had a Form Tze-Yin Teo, 2022-04-05

The likeness of form between Chinese and English sentences writes the American Sinologist Ernest Fenollosa around 1906 renders translation from one to the other exceptionally easy If Babel Had a Form asks not if his claim may be true but what its phantasmic surprise may yet do In twentieth century intersections of China and Asia with the United States translations did more than communicate meaning across politicized and racializing differences of language and nation Transpacific translation breached the regulative protocols that created those very differences of human value and cultural meaning The result Tze Yin Teo argues saw translators cleaving to the sounds and shapes of poetry to imagine a translingual likeness of form but not of meaning or kind At stake in this form without meaning is a startling new task of equivalence As a concept equivalence has been rejected for its colonizing epistemology of value naming a broken promise of translation and false premise of comparison Yet the writers studied in this book veered from those ways of knowing to theorize a poetic equivalence negating the colonial foundations of the concept they ignited aporias of meaning into flashpoints for a radical literary translation. The book's transpacific readings glean those forms of equivalence from the writing of Fenollosa, the vernacular experiments of Boxer Scholar Hu Shi, the trilingual musings of Shanghai born Los Angeles novelist Eileen Chang, the minor work of the Bay Area Korean American transmedial artist Theresa Cha, and a post Tiananmen elegy by the exiled dissident Yang Lian. The conclusion returns to the deconstructive genealogy of recent debates on translation and untranslatability, displacing the axiom of radical alterity for a no less radical equivalence that remains pace Fenollosa far from easy or exceptional. Ultimately If Babel Had a Form illuminates the demanding force of even the slightest sameness entangled in the translator's work of remaking our differences. A Practical Introduction to the Study of Japanese Writing Basil Hall Chamberlain, 1899
