Losing And Fusing Borderline Transitional Object And Self Relations:

Losing and Fusing Roger A. m.d. Lewin, Clarence G. Schulz, 1992 Presents a self relations approach to the borderline syndrome. The authors look at these difficult patients as having core disorders of affective self identity. The therapeutic relationship is the crucial crucible for transformation in the patient's form of his relationship to himself. Rethinking

Freedom C. Alford, 2005-05-12 This book examines the use and abuse of the term freedom. Based on interviews with people concerning the nature of freedom the author compares what the people he talked with said about freedom with what writers and thinkers such as Jean Paul Sartre, Herbert Marcuse and Iris Murdoch have to say about freedom. He concludes that the political is not the answer and that most of the people interviewed for the book and those like them would be better served by learning the political and social skills necessary to carve out small spaces of freedom in a rationalized world. Strong Anticipation: Compensating Delay And Distance Susie Vrobel, 2023-12-06 This book is concerned with the notion of strong anticipation. Clearly defined necessary and sufficient conditions are laid out. The focus lies on strong anticipation as delay and distance compensation as in temporal recalibration and synchronization of coupled systems. Of particular interest are delays which correspond to a boundary shift between a systemic whole and its context. Such boundary shifts result from assignment conditions which determine what belongs to the systemic whole and what belongs to its context. Delay and distance compensation is described along with long range correlations against the background of a theory of time capable of describing anticipative systems. My Theory of Fractal Time describes anticipatory systems in terms of two temporal dimensions: succession and simultaneity which are defined and measured in tdepth (length) and tdensity. These extensions form an extended present and allow a quantified comparison of observers. Observer participants temporal interfaces. Compensated delays are revealed as phenomenal blind spots which result in a new kind of relativity. What may be compensated for observer A is delayed for observer B. Compensated delays are ubiquitous and can be found in both cognitive and physical processes. Examples are temporal recalibration to restore degraded visuomotor adaptation coupling, environment and brain biosemiotics and homeostatic processes, dynamical diseases, embedded and situated robots control loops with inserted or removed delays, cellular automata, analog and digital notions of trust, transitional objects and potential spaces, our perception of time and judgement of duration. It is proposed that compensated delays emerge as natural laws.

Aggression and Destructiveness Celia HARDING, 2006-09-27 Why, when and how does aggression go wrong? How can we make sense of apparently meaningless destructiveness and violence? Aggression is a part of human nature that energises our relationships, acts as an impetus for psychic development and enables us to master our world. More often we focus on its more destructive aspects such as the violence individuals inflict on themselves or others and overlook the positive functions of aggression. In Aggression and Destructiveness Celia Harding brings together contributions from experienced psychoanalysts and psychoanalytic psychotherapists to explore the roots of aggression and the clinical dilemmas it presents.

in psychotherapy Beginning with accounts of aggression and destructiveness from a range of developmental and theoretical perspectives the book provides useful insights into subjects including Bullying and abusive relationships Male and female violence and destructiveness Depressive perverse and psychotic states of mind Attacks on therapeutic treatment This book makes a valuable contribution to the attempt to make sense of human aggression destructiveness and violence perpetrated against the self others and reality It will be of great interest to trainee and qualified psychodynamic counsellors psychoanalytic psychotherapists and psychoanalysts Borderline Personality Disorder John G. Compassion Roger A.

Lewin,1996-03 The practice of psychotherapy is not simply a matter of technique but depends on one's entire way of looking at the world especially at that which is dark and difficult in human experience. Compassion, the intelligent pursuit of kindness, lies at the very heart of the psychotherapeutic enterprise. Using examples drawn from life inside and outside the consulting room, Roger A. Lewin explores the meanings, encounters and quandaries that arise with the quest to be compassionate. The author considers compassion as a virtue at once personal and political, which both depends on and helps create a social and cultural climate. He considers compassion as it relates to the capacity to listen to hurting and being hurt, to dependency to joy, to grieving to homelessness, to drug use to institutional life to evil and to the self. He uses the understanding of compassion as a way to link what goes on inside the consulting room with what goes on outside it. To reflect on compassion is to seek a tuning fork for the heart so that we can keep our passion in that part of our living and loving we call work. This helps therapists to be engaged and receptive. While such reflection may sometimes make us uncomfortable, the comfort that comes from remaining numb is ultimately more unbearable.
