Managing The Devolved Budget:

Managing the Devolved Budget Jennifer Bean, Lascelles Hussey, 2011-09-01 Managing and being responsible for public funds is one of the most important tasks of a public sector manager particularly in the current environment where budgets are constrained and in many cases reducing. This is an area of skill and knowledge that cannot be taken for granted as many public sector managers will have had no formal training in this area. It is an ideal practical text to assist managers become more effective and efficient in the way in which they undertake budget management. The outcome being improved value for money services which benefit the whole community. This book is one of a series of books entitled Essential Skills for the Public Sector. Its target readership is any person in the public sector who manages a budget. It covers the process of devolvement preparing budgets, controlling and monitoring budgets, understanding financial information and the link between management and financial responsibility.

Managing Devolved Budgets Richard Boyle, 1991 Handbook for

Assessing and Managing Care in the Community Philip Seed, Gillian Kaye, 1994 This practical book covers the complex issues involved in assessment procedures and care management. It is addressed to care managers and to social care providers including staff at all levels. It includes sample forms and many examples and explains in clear terms the implications of various approaches. The reader is shown not only how best to carry out assessments but what is the broader meaning and context of specific assessment tasks. The first chapter explores the difficulties of maintaining the ideals of care in the community namely a needs led person centred approach in the face of resource and procedural constraints. It looks at such key current issues as quality of life criteria and the changing role of local authority services from main provider of facilities to enabler or facilitator. Traditional assessment approaches are considered in later chapters as well as techniques for costing services and issues arising from a traditional unit costs approach. An alternative real costs procedure is recommended and explained with examples. In the final chapter care management issues are summarised for people with very special needs including adults with profound intellectual and physical disabilities, people with multiple disabilities, potentially life threatening illnesses or challenging behaviour and people with serious addictions. The book is informed by recent research including major research funded by the Scottish Office which focused on adults with learning difficulties. Implications are also drawn from the authors broader experiences of working with other client groups.

Effective Leadership, Management and Supervision in Health and Social Care Ivan Gray, Richard Field, Keith Brown, 2010-03-31 This book offers a comprehensive introduction to the areas of leadership, management and supervision for line managers, supervisors and senior practitioners. Taking a problem solving approach the book explores different aspects of leadership and management including personal effectiveness, managing and leading, supervision, managing training and development, managing resources and leading and developing a team. A precise review of each project area is linked to a set of audit tools that a manager can mobilise in order to review team and personal effectiveness and develop practice.

summary of the relevant policy and legal framework and to provide signposts to assist managers in making their way through the maze of service planning and service development options Managing Mental Health Services will be a leading practical handbook in its field a point of reference for hands on managers and a source of stimulating advice tips and guidance in mental health service management

Reforming the Russian Budget System Jack Diamond,2005 The Russian federal government has recently initiated a fundamental reform of its budget system encompassing important policy procedural and institutional changes This paper reviews this reform agenda with reference to the experience of industrial countries that over the past two to three decades have followed a similar reform path toward a more devolved budget management system From this perspective the importance of the strength of existing public expenditure management systems to accommodate increased devolution and the scope for employing decentralized agencies is explored An assessment of the present Russian reform plans in light of this review reveals a number of concerns First the speed of the reforms contemplated appears overly ambitious when judged by the experience of other countries Second the preparedness of budget institutions is questionable Third change management capacity needs strengthening with a more carefully defined strategy Last in light of these concerns it is argued that the scope and big bang approach of the current reform plans may need reformulation into a more sequenced strategy with clearer reform priorities

Managing Business Processes Colin Armistead,Philip Rowland,1996-11-07 Leaders in their field of expertise present a cross disciplinary view of business process re engineering BPR going beyond an information systems perspective to take into account strategic and operations management human resources and accounting They investigate the idea that BPR challenges the functional viewpoint of an enterprise cutting across traditional structures to lead to radical improvements in performance Uses case studies to support the research based concepts
