(1945-2010)

"THE SECRET OF OUR SUCCESS IS THAT WE NEVER, NEVER GIVE UP."
- WILMA MANKILLER

Barbie® recognizes all female role models. The Inspiring Women™ Series pays tribute to incredible heroines of their time, courageous women who took risks, changed rules, and paved the way for generations of girls to dream bigger than ever before.

Born in Tahlequah, Oklahoma, the capital of the Cherokee Nation, Principal Chief Wilma Mankiller was the sixth of eleven children in her family. At the age of eleven, Wilma and her family relocated from their home on Cherokee Nation land to San Francisco as part of the Indian Relocation Act of 1956. It was there years later in 1968, she would become active in advocating for Native American and women's rights. Wilma became a social worker, and from the beginning of her career, dedicated herself to empowering Native people and indigenous communities and restoring pride in their culture.

In 1977, Wilma returned to the Cherokee Nation and her ancestral home Mankiller Flats, there she founded the Cherokee Nation Community Development Department which focused on rehabilitating and restoring access to basic needs for the rural community. When she asked what the community needed most, the response was "Amia," the Cherokee word for water. A feature film was made about the power of the Cherokee value of gashgi (the coming together of the Cherokee people to meet a need) and how Wilma worked with the community to construct a roughly 20-mile waterline to get water to Bell. In 1983, Wilma became the first woman to ever serve as Deputy Chief, and two years later, the first woman to serve as Principal Chief of the Cherokee Nation. She served in the leadership role for ten years.

Throughout her illustrious life, Wilma Mankiller advocated for social justice, Native people, women, and children. She attained national and global recognition for her achievements and was awarded the prestigious Presidential Medal of Freedom in 1995, the highest civilian honor. Wilma dedicated her life to advocacy and worked hard to make the world brighter for future generations.

Girls need more role models like Principal Chief Wilma Mankiller, because imagining they can be anything is just the beginning. Actually seeing that they can makes all the difference.
