Negotiations with the Chill Wind John Hughes,1991 Papers and Discussions Presented Before the [Coal] Division American Institute of Mining, Metallurgical, and Petroleum Engineers,1894 Negotiating Freer Trade Ian M. Drummond,Norman Hillmer,2006-01-01 On November 17 1938 Great Britain the United States and Canada after four years of discussion and manoeuvre signed two wide ranging and interlocking trade agreements A few large elements dominated the talks The Americans wanted to breach the walls of the British imperial preferential tariff system The British were anxious to retain markets and political support in the British dominions and the Baltic while protecting their domestic agriculture and improving political relations with the United States Canada whose acquiescence and co operation were necessitated by the pre existing network of trade agreements hoped to win new export markets to retain old ones and to achieve international political tranquility through economic means Although the negotiations began with a mixture of lofty and ignoble motives in the end the latter predominated The authors have drawn on archival and statistical materials in all three countries to provide a clear and detailed account of the economic context of the mid 1930s the process of negotiations the issues and the political and economic significance both then and now of the final agreements Their work is a valuable case study of the problems that face any country that tries to negotiate freer trade It is therefore full of contemporary resonance and relevance and will be of interest to students of and specialists in modern history European British and North American international relations and international economic policy Hearings United States. involvement of developing countries in coalitional activity in the current GATT Uruguay round thus far and provides a rudimentary evaluation of the pros and cons of the different options for them as far as coalitional strategies are concerned. The main conclusions are that much of the coalitional activity involving developing countries thus far in the round has been agenda moving and joint proposal making rather than negotiating involving exchanges of concession. At the same time however coalitional activity by a larger group of mid sized developed and smaller developing countries who see a major interest in preserving the multilateral system has been central to the process. Fast Forward John Hughes, 2003 Fourth collection from Downpatrick born poet. Negotiating for Amenities: An overview Clint Page, Penelope Cuff, 1982
