Negotiating Diversity:

Negotiating Diversity Matthew Festenstein, 2005 Debates about cultural diversity have become an important controversial and inescapable features of the politics of modern democracies Negotiating Diversity offers a lucid and accessible analysis of the political theory of multiculturalism It is an ideal text for students looking for an overview of the state of play in this area The book explores the ways the concept of culture has been used in political theory and critically evaluates contemporary liberal responses to multiculturalism including the work of key political philosophers such as Will Kymlicka Brian Barry and Chandran Kukathas drawing on a range of real world examples to illustrate its arguments It provides critique of the tendency to reify cultural identity in political thinking particularly through an examination of contemporary liberalism In its place the author develops a deliberative alternative which views the politics of cultural diversity as a fallible process of negotiation argument and compromise He confronts objections that this alternative itself offers an unrealistic or oppressive vision of politics and explores the fragility of trust in the politics of multicultural societies

Negotiating Diversity Alain-G. Gagnon, José-Maria Sauca, 2014 This book provides new insights into the negotiation and management of diversity in complex democratic settings Much debate has been generated recently over questions of human rights and dignity with the aim of empowering and improving the recognition of smaller nations The book's central idea is that respect for democracy and protection of human rights represent the most potent ways for the advancement and enrichment of cultural ideological and legal pluralism The pursuit and accomplishment of such objectives can only be achieved through negotiation that leads to the accommodation and empowerment of minority groups and nations Negotiating Diversity brings into dialogue political scientists philosophers and jurists and enriches a major discussion launched some years back by Yael Tamir's Liberal Nationalism Alain G Gagnon and James Tully's Multinational Democracies as well as Wayne Norman's Negotiating Nationalism and Will Kymlicka's Multicultural Citizenship Negotiating Diversity, 2014

Come as You are, 2013 We live in a time described by some as post racial Carter 2009 Fordham 2010 Lum 2009 Metzler 2009 Steele 2008 While the idea continues to be debated those who think of the U S as such claim that racial boundaries no longer have significant import for daily life or at least not the same import as in past eras Some would even point to America's elite college university campuses to demonstrate that our nation has moved beyond the rigid and strained racial boundaries that once characterized our country Indeed selective colleges universities have become increasingly focused on fostering racially diverse campuses over the last 40 years Espenshade Radford Chung 2009 Further campus cultural racial student groups have also begun to have members who do not self identify with the culture race being represented Thus the question emerges regarding the meaning members both those who self identify with the culture race being represented and those who do not make of their participation in these groups The Kuumba Singers of Harvard College provides a unique context for this inquiry Kuumba is the university's oldest black student organization as well as the largest multicultural organization on campus with members representing a variety of backgrounds including ethnicities across the African diaspora as well as white Asian and Latino members Using the methodology of portraiture this research explores these specific research questions How if at all does Kuumba as an organization address race ethnicity diversity How do students of various backgrounds come to participate in Kuumba and what makes them stay How do individual students in the organization negotiate race ethnicity diversity and related tensions and potential benefits And what is the role of music and performance in this process of negotiation Through this research I found that Kuumba pushed beyond the bounds of representation
