Netting The Sun A Personal Geography Of The Oregon Desert:

Netting the Sun Melvin R. Adams, 2001 Carefully woven Netting the Sun offers a diversity of natural and human stories from a landscape seemingly empty and forlorn to passing casual travelers This surprising interpretation of south central Oregon s botany geology climate wildlife ethnography and history reveals what a truly special place the high desert is Born in the sagebrush community of Lakeview in 1941 the author moved on following high school graduation But as with many native sons and daughters from America s out of the way places the urge to return to his roots proved irresistible in middle age I endeavored to write this collection about the Oregon desert because of my childhood there Adams writes but also because it is a place of startling mystery subdued danger and beauty

The Sagebrush Curtain Melvin Adams, 2019-08-08 This book contains a diversity of natural and human stories about the southeast quarter of Oregon state an area seemingly empty and barren to many people driving through it This surprising view of the region features the botany geology wildlife and history of the area wrapped in a memoir of the author s youth spent there Born in the sagebrush community of Lakeview in 1941 the author moved on following high school graduation But as with many native sons and daughters from out of the way places the urge to return to his roots proved irresistible I endeavored to write this collection about the Oregon desert because of my childhood there says Adams but also because it is a place of startling mystery subdued danger and beauty

A Country Strange and Far Michael C. McKenzie, 2022 In 1834 the weary missionary Jason Lee arrived on the banks of the Willamette River and began to build a mission to convert the local Kalapuya and Chinook populations to the Methodist Church The denomination had become a religious juggernaut in the United States dominating the religious scene throughout the mid Atlantic and East Coast But despite its power and prestige and legions of clergy and congregants Methodism fell short of its goals of religious supremacy in the northwest corner of the continent In A Country Strange and Far Michael C McKenzie considers how and why the Methodist Church failed in the Pacific Northwest and how place can affect religious transplantation and growth Methodists failed to convert local Native people in large numbers and immigrants who moved into the rural areas and cities of the Northwest wanted little to do with Methodism McKenzie analyzes these failures arguing the region itself both the natural geography of the place and the immigrants and clergy s responses to it was a primary reason for the church s inability to develop a strong following there The Methodists efforts in the Pacific Northwest provide an ideal case study for McKenzie s timely region based look at religion

Believing In Place Richard V. Francaviglia, 2016-02-01 The austere landscape of the Great Basin has inspired diverse responses from the people who have moved through or settled in it Author Richard V Francaviglia is interested in the connection between environment and spirituality in the Great Basin for here he says faith and landscape conspire to resurrect old myths and create new ones As a geographer Francaviglia knows that place means more than physical space Human perceptions and interpretations are what give place its meaning In Believing in Place he examines the varying human perceptions of and relationships with the Great Basin landscape from the region's Native American groups to contemporary tourists and politicians to determine the spiritual issues that have shaped our connections with this place. In doing so he considers the creation and flood myths of several cultures, the impact of the Judeo-Christian tradition and individualism, Native American animism and shamanist traditions, the Mormon landscape, the spiritual dimensions of gambling, the religious foundations of Cold War ideology, stories of UFOs and alien presence, and the convergence of science and spirituality. Believing in Place is a profound and totally engaging reflection on the ways that human needs and spiritual traditions can shape our perceptions of the land. That the Great Basin has inspired such a complex variety of responses is partly due to its enigmatic vastness and isolation, partly to the remarkable range of peoples who have found themselves in the region. Using not only the materials of traditional geography but folklore, anthropology, Native American and Euro-American religion, contemporary politics, and New Age philosophies, Francaviglia has produced a fascinating and timely investigation of the role of human conceptions of place in that space we call the Great Basin.

Terrain of Salt Melvin Adams, 2015-03-26 These essays reflect the author's encounter with the numinous dimension found in nature as expressed in religious texts, poetry, modern and primitive art, and science. Many of these essays were influenced by his experience growing up on the semi-arid steppe of Oregon. Pacific Northwest Quarterly, 2001

Remote Wonders Melvin R. Adams, 2015-10-01 At first the basalt rims, high cold deserts, dry lakes, and vast expanses of grass and sage seem to be a barren realm. In fact, petite flowers bloom on rock shelves. Tiny organisms thrive in hot springs and salt water. Unique soil collects and retains water, allowing ancient pine stands to survive. Pikas build miniature grass haystacks to store winter food. Petroglyphs and remnants of ranches, mills, and mines provide evidence of human history. Indeed, remote southeast Oregon is a rich wonderland of mountains, forests, creatures, and more, one well worth exploring. Born and raised in Oregon's Outback, the author's affection for the region shines through. He designed Remote Wonders as a road tour guide, and his essays and numerous photos highlight notable natural and historical features. Supplemental information includes side trip and other travel recommendations, and a pull-out map is keyed to selected sites.

Atomic Geography Melvin R. Adams, 2021-06-18 I have spent a career sifting through the rubble, the abandoned documents, the factories, and tools with the thought of saving what remains of water, land, and animals. But water, wind, and root have their way. Melvin R. Adams, Perhaps the first environmental engineer at Hanford, Adams spent twenty-four years on its 586 square miles. His thoughtful vignettes recall challenges and sites he worked on or found personally intriguing, like the 216 U pond. Nestled among the trees, the pond looks like a pleasant place to go fishing. In reality, it has been contaminated with plutonium longer than any other place on earth. In what Adams considers his most successful project, he helped determine the initial scope of the soil and solid waste cleanup. The Environmental Restoration and Disposal Facility today covers 107 acres and has a capacity of 18 million tons. His group also designed and tested a marked maintenance-free disposal barrier. It uses natural materials that will remain stable for thousands of years They expanded a network of groundwater monitoring wells to define contaminated plumes assess treatment effectiveness and provide relevant data to hydrologists They also developed a pilot scale pump and treatment plant for use on a four square mile carbon tetrachloride plume His environmental and engineering unit included a biological control group fondly dubbed The Weeds They controlled tumbleweeds tracked and collected plants and animals found growing or digging in contaminated sites and caught stray wildlife discovered in Hanford offices In Atomic Geography Adams presents some surprising revelations He shares his perspective on leaking high level waste storage tanks dosimeters and Hanford s obsession with safety He answers the question he is asked most insisting he does not glow in the dark He leaves that to spent fuel rods in water storage basins a phenomenon known as Cherenkov radiation
