

Network Exchange Theory Experiments

Power-dependence theory spawned a cottage industry of experimental & simulation studies based on computerized laboratories. Sociologists tested NET propositions about variations in exchange network forms, in which structural positions control differing resources and opportunities to increase power & rewards by deals with alternative exchange partners.

Core design elements in NET experiments include:

- Differential distribution of valued resources among set of actors
- Structurally restricted opportunities for dyads to exchange
- Exchange relations link all actors into single network structure
- Actors seek profits by negotiating exchange prices with alters

Macro-Micro Linkages in Sociology Joan Huber,1991-03 In this volume twenty leading sociologists consider the dichotomy between micro and macro level analysis in social research All demonstrate the inescapable connections between the two and attempt to link them together This topic is approached from various theoretical perspectives including the interrelationship of large scale and small scale theories variables and concepts It is studied more specifically in relation to institutions such as education work and family gender and demographic research The Effect of Social Uncertainty in Networks of Social Exchange Eric Rice,2002 A Network Perspective of Multiple Social Exchange Relationships Lynette

Rylander Gillis,2008 Members of organizations form relationships with many different people in their organization Exchange theory provides a basis for analyzing how these organizational relationships function in two different ways Leader member exchange LMX theory describes how an employee s relationship with his her leader influences his her attitudes and behaviors while coworker exchange theory CWX focuses on the attitudes and behaviors that result from relationships between coworkers Few researchers have investigated how leader member exchange theory and co worker exchange theory work together to affect employee level attitudes and behaviors In this dissertation I use a social network framework to synthesize and articulate the confluence of leader member exchange and coworker exchange theories Based on a review of the literature on leader member exchange and coworker exchange I argue that these co occurring social exchange processes combine to affect attitudes and behaviors Using outcome measures of performance and affective commitment I develop hypotheses testing how employees social networks of coworkers affect these employees behaviors and attitudes in the leader member relationship This study uses employees in a large USA based retail organization I gather data from multiple sources including the employees and their leaders Using the computer program UCINET I calculate social network matrix manipulations I also use SPSS to calculate regressions to test my hypotheses This dissertation contributes to our understanding of 1 joint effects of various social exchange relationships in the context of specific leader member relationships and 2 the different aspects of a social network framework that differentially influence organizational outcomes
