Maternity Policies And Working Women:

Mothers on the Job Lise Vogel, 1993 Women's increasing demands for protection and benefits in the workplace especially with regard to maternity leave have sparked more than a century of controversy among feminists on how best to serve the needs of working women. This debate continues to divide the feminist community. One side believes women are better served by emphasizing equality with men; pregnancy should be treated like any other disability. The other side wants to recognize difference; special provisions should apply only to pregnant women. Lise Vogel examines the evolution of this debate on pregnant women in the workplace, looking at theoretical as well as practical implications. Vogel begins by assessing the history of the contemporary debate on pregnancy policy in the U.S. Since the middle of the nineteenth century, American women have been torn by the contradictory demands of motherhood and the workplace. Pregnancy was grounds for dismissal from work, and few employers took action to protect pregnant workers. To counter this, early twentieth-century feminists and reformers emphasized female specificity and women's special role. In the 1960s, activists adopted a strategy framed on equality, which moved away from the earlier emphasis on differences. The use of equality strategies to cover the female-specific phenomenon of pregnancy turned out to have problems. Now, women's special needs were denied and ignored. These difficulties and a series of court cases in the 1980s triggered debates in the feminist legal community. Vogel looks at the litigation and debates which pitted advocates of gender-neutral strategies against critics who called for female-specific policies. Vogel argues that in terms of practical benefits, women will be served best by a gender-neutral approach to pregnancy policy. She encourages equality advocates to recognize the inherent diversity of individuals and points out the need to be sensitive to individual factors of race and class as well as sex.

Working Women and their Rights in the Workplace Naeima Faraj A.A. Al-Hadad, 2016-03-09 This book addresses women's rights to work and motherhood in Libya from a legal and international human rights perspective. In an attempt to solve the problem posed by the perception that there is an unsolvable conflict between the right of women to work and their right to motherhood, the author considers how these two sets of rights as protected under international human rights law can and should be recognised and promoted within the Libyan legal system. Including first-hand accounts of experiences of Libyan women, the study voices their struggle for their rights as guaranteed by domestic law, international conventions, and Islam. Providing a rare insight into a region striving to find its new identity, the author assesses the adequacy of existing Libyan laws and where warranted offers proposals for legislative amendments to Libyan policy makers and its new Parliament at such a crucial time in the nation's history.

Women in Public Life: Gender, Law and Policy in the Middle East and North Africa OECD, Center of Arab Woman for Training and Research, 2014-11-27 This report provides a comparative overview of the policies affecting women's participation in public life across the MENA region. It examines the existing barriers to women's access to public decision-making positions and provides a cross-country assessment of current instruments and institutions.
