Multinationals In Eastern Europe:

Multinationals in Eastern Europe Patrick Artisien-Maksimenko,2000 This study identifies and analyzes the extent to which the transition economies of Central Europe Russia Central Asia and the Caucasus are likely to attract inward foreign direct investment to the turn of the century and beyond The book binds together the current theoretical knowledge of foreign capital and technology transfers to transition economies Strategies of Multinationals in Central and Eastern Europe

Welfens,2012-12-06 After a decade of Eurosclerosis the EC is moving with renewed economic growth and increasing multinational investment toward a single European market under the heading Project 1992 The creation of a single EC market creates dynamic adjustment needs and opens up new opportunities for international business in a period of intensified global competition and dramatic politico economic changes Since the mid 1980s Eastern Europe is undergoing a radical shift towards market based economic systems a difficult and fragile development so far which is further complicated by economic and political unification of Germany in central Europe After the era of British and later U S leadership in multinational investment German and Japanese multinational companies are becoming more influential players worldwide Firms from Germany play a special role because German unification of 1990 implies a bigger home market but also the diversion of total investment activities towards the greater German home market While the political divide of Europe has ceased to exist the economic division is becoming more apparent and it could indeed transitorily increase because the EC 1992 project primarily generates growth impulses in Western Europe while systemic transformations in Eastern Europe reduce output growth in the short term Strategies of Multinationals and Competition for Foreign Direct Investment

Charles Albert Michalet,1997-01-01 Is there a trade off among countries in attracting foreign direct investment FDI And in particular has the opening up of Central and Eastern Europe diverted FDI that otherwise would have gone to developing countries To answer these questions FIAS c

Transformation in Central and Eastern Europe Violaine Delteil, Vassil Nikolaev Kirov, 2016-07-22 Over a quarter of a century after the fall of the Berlin Wall and 10 years after their accession to the European Union EU Central and Eastern Europe Countries CEECs still show marked differences with the rest of Europe in the fields of labour work and industrial relations This book presents a detailed and original analysis of labour and social transformations in the CEECs By examining a wide range of countries in Central Europe Labour and Social Transformation in Central and Eastern Europe offers a comprehensive and contrasting view of labour developments in Central and Eastern Europe Chapters explore three related issues The first deals with the understanding of the complex process of Europeanization applied in the sphere of labour employment and industrial relations The second issue refers to the attempt to link the Europeanization approach with an analysis mobilizing the theoretical concept of dependent capitalism s The third issue refers to the cumulative trends of labour weakening and labour awakening that has emerged in particular in the aftermath of the crisis beginning in 2007 2008 This book will be of interest to academics policy makers and stakeholders at European and national level in the EU member states

Foreign Direct Investment in Central and Eastern Europe Svetla Trifonova Marinova, 2018-01-12 This title was first published in 2003 Covering a diverse range of countries such as Bulgaria the Czech Republic Hungary Poland Slovakia Slovenia and Russia as well as referring to the characteristics of the region as a whole this book examines the inflow and outflow of foreign direct investment from both home and host company and country perspectives By analyzing foreign direct investment in terms of process content and context the book provides a holist approach towards direct foreign investment in the transitional context of Central and Eastern Europe embracing both macro and micro economic perspectives of the process The How the East was Won Charles Paul Lewis, 2005-03-02 MNC s have not received a good press in recent years This book attempts to redress the balance of the argument by showing the extraordinary and positive impact of MNC s in Eastern Europe and the former Soviet union during the transition to free market capitalism The book also attempts to answer why the impact of MNC s in Eastern Europe should be different to the less commendable experience in Africa and Latin America and whether MNC s reinforce the power of corrupt rulers In concluding that MNC s are not necessarily the enemy of development but can be instrumental to progress the book draws on lessons from 21 East European transition countries to show how the economic power of MNC s can be harnessed elsewhere in the developing world The Organization of European Multinationals Dalia Marin,2012 Recent literature on international trade has established that the most productive firms become multinationals But our data reveal a startling variation in productivity levels of foreign affiliates across the countries in Eastern Europe of the same European multinational parent firms suggesting that not all multinationals transplant their home productivity advantage to the new EU Member States and Emerging Europe One candidate for this startling difference in productivity levels among foreign affiliates is the ability of European multinationals to transport their business model abroad This paper examines the conditions under which European multinationals give autonomy to their subsidiaries and delegate authority to them We also analyse the conditions under which European multinationals transplant their business model to Eastern Europe We collect original and unique matched parent and affiliate data on the internal organization of 660 German and Austrian parent firms and 2200 of their subsidiaries in Eastern Europe including the former Soviet Union We test the hypothesis that the ability of European multinationals to transplant their business model to foreign affiliates is determined by the organization of European multinationals on the one hand and the market environment their affiliate firms face in Eastern Europe on the other hand We show that the business culture of parent firms accounts for about 50 percent of the variation of the organization of subsidiaries while the market environment of subsidiaries contributes the rest Multinationals and Transition J. Manea,R. Pearce,2004-03-03 This book refocuses thinking on how multinational enterprises MNEs can achieve a sustained contribution to European transition economies as these countries move from the processes of transformation into pursuit of more sustained development The authors apply key aspects of recent work on the strategic aims and nature of the contemporary MNE to the transition economy context and find that the generation and application of technology has particular relevance to the success of MNEs in Central and Eastern Europe The book is based on the results of two new wide ranging surveys and includes a thorough review of current literature Multinationals-e.-w. Rel Jozef Wilczynski,1976-09-27 Monograph on international relations of capitalist countries and socialist countries in respect of multinational enterprises examines conflicts arising from differences in political ideologies includes economic implications technology transfer the role of socialist countries exports to western multinationals international agreements joint ventures ownership and financial aspects in CMEA countries marketing trends etc Directory of multinational corporations and their affiliates and references Cross-Border Investing Julia

Djarova,2007-05-08 Cross Border Investing The Case of Central and Eastern Europe offers a view that reflects two main hypotheses You cannot understand foreign direct investment FDI trends and developments unless you understand the company s motives to invest You cannot understand a company s cross border investment decision making unless you understand what the investment area offers This is the reason why this text builds up a relationship between the world of companies decision makers and that of the policy makers in the public sector It does so by linking the business processes to the factors that together constitute the location profile of a country or a region Based on more than 15 years of practical experience as well as research in the field of FDI Dr Julia Djarova offers a Cross Border Investment Model to describe the logic behind the decision making process concerning foreign investments made by companies The model is illustrated by a number of case studies of multinationals

The European Multinationals Lawrence G. Franko, 1976 Monograph on the evolution of multinational enterprises of Western Europe since about 1800 describes the manufacturing mining and petroleum extraction activities of Europe s 85 largest enterprises examines the causes of their ventures into the international market and studies their role in developing countries the USA and the EC etc Bibliography pp 246 to 266 graphs references and statistical tables
