Reconciling Catholicism and Feminism? Sally Barr Ebest, Ron Ebest, 2003. In this collection of essays 22 writers, historians, theologians and feminists thoughtfully reflect on their own personal experiences with the Catholic Church. The essayists describe how they have or in some cases have not come to terms with a church that does not permit them full participation. In so doing they offer practical suggestions for ways in which the Church can become more open to the concerns of its progressive members. Radford Ruether who provides a brief history of 20th century reform movements, internationally known journalist Mary Kenny who writes on the abortion debate in Ireland, Pulitzer Prize winner Madeleine Blais who discusses her youth in parochial schools, short story writer and New Yorker contributor Jean McGarry who describes the clash of Catholic and secular cultures and Grail co-founder Janet Kalven who depicts the history of this widely recognized religious reform movement. Ebest provide context for these personal and poignant essays. In a format that is easily accessible to general readers. Reconciling Catholicism and Feminism explores issues of concern to progressive and feminist Catholics including abortion, birth control, clerical celibacy and the ordination of women.

How the Language and Culture of Scholars Affects the Choice of Their Subjects and Methods of Research Xaé Alicia Reyes, 2005. This book is a reflective essay that challenges the paradigms used in qualitative research both at the level of data collecting and at the eventual publishing and or sharing of findings. In reviewing published research and witnessing presentations of data resulting from interviews, narratives, open ended questionnaires and field notes, critical issues related to the languages and cultures of both researchers and researched appear to be neglected. In this text discussions of potential misunderstandings and misinterpretations often not accounted for in reporting findings are deconstructed and posited as potentially harmful to informing practice and policy in fields such as education, policy design and the social sciences. The goal of this book is to encourage explicit discussions of the impact of differences in languages and cultures of the researchers and researched in the design and practice of qualitative methods and in the reporting of findings.
