crucial role in the world's most momentous events from wars and royal weddings to mankind's first steps on the Moon is in the midst of a digital fuelled revolution. In its early years TV news was monopolised by large corporations and state broadcasters who controlled what went on air and when. Then technological advances in the 1980s enabled billionaires like Ted Turner and Rupert Murdoch to muscle in and beam 24 hour news channels across the world via cable and satellite. Today we are living through a third turbulent iteration streaming over the internet is radically changing how television is produced, watched and delivered. It has so dramatically lowered the costs of entry into what was once the exclusive domain of governments, multinationals and tycoons that almost anyone can now set up their own global news channel. But in such a fragmented world awash with fake news, who and what can we trust? In this stimulating and authoritative study Zafar Siddiqi, who has launched and run four news channels across three continents, discusses the profound implications of this new era. Aimed at entrepreneurs, media students, industry insiders and anyone interested in TV news and its effect on humankind, it serves as a step-by-step guide for launching a news channel in the digital age. Areas as diverse as home banking and shopping over the Internet, WWW access over mobile phone networks and television systems such as Web TV which combine on-line services with television. But convergence is not just about technology. It is also about services and new ways of doing business and of interacting with society. Digital convergence heralds the Information Revolution. Edited by John Vince and Rae Earnshaw, this important new book on Digital Convergence: The Information Revolution is an edited volume of papers bringing together state-of-the-art developments in the Internet and World Wide Web and should be compulsory reading for all those interested in and working in those areas. Australian Broadcast Journalism Gail Phillips, Mia Lindgren, 2006. Australian Broadcast Journalism is a practical guide to broadcast journalism.
