

Murder of a Metropolis

Smell, foul and pungent, greeted us on arrival at the airport. Stagnant rainwater, uncollected garbage and disgorging open manholes had turned the city into the world's largest sewerage network.

Outside the passenger terminal, we ran by chance into Mr. Hasan Jafri whose unfailing smile had obviously survived Karachi's atmospheric disaster. He offered us a ride which we gratefully accepted. "Oh, that, he exclaimed nonchalantly when I mentioned the pervasive smell, "one gets used to it. He mentioned other real" problems: "People are getting electrocuted on the road; four died last week..." He cited Karachi's electrocution statistics for the previous five years, and we speculated on the possibility of suing its municipal government for multiple manslaughters.

He was right about the smell. By next day, I was used to it. But the 'problems', all man-made remained. Following a rain shower earlier in the afternoon the city's culvertless roads were flooded, knee-deep in some sections where water had collected from the previous week's rain. Cars stalled, hitting potholes, manholes and piles of rubbish. It took more than one hour by car to travel less than two miles from Zainab Market to the Marriott Hotel. Remarkably, people remained calm, generally helpful to each other; some managed even to smile back at us. A relative had an explanation for the pervasive stoicism. "Life, he said, "is normally difficult here. The rains have merely accentuated the difficulties."

This was an understatement. The same relative, a young architect, recounted how he has not been able to deliver a set of designs to a foreign group. "They were ready but we could not print them out. We have waited, five hours at a time, for the power line. It goes out sometimes before a sheet is printed. We have averaged six to eight hours a sheet." "But you told them about the power failures?" I queried with, concern. "Why should they care," he snapped. "They are interested in the product they have contracted for, not my problems in producing it." His wife, a designer, says that in the last three weeks not more than three days worth of work has been done in her workshop. The printers who live in Landhi have missed work often because transportation is not available; also some of them live in kachcha homes which have collapsed; then there are the power failures. "We may be better off, she speculates, "if we do away with modern things like electricity, buses, telephones. We depend on them but our government does not know how to organise these things."

I reflect on their situation after they leave. They are talented, dynamic, and hard-working young professionals, just the kind a country relies on for fast growth. They came to Karachi from Lahore. Karachi is the magnet of educated and energetic Pakistanis. More than fifty per cent of the subscribers of English language dailies live there. But there, as in the rest of the country, they waste away. Their frustrations are palpable. Some leave the country and succeed elsewhere. Others become cynical, lose integrity, and join the unproductive race for fast bucks.

In the cafeteria of Marriott Hotel, an American business executive talked of his failed mission. He works for an international conglomerate and was here to explore investment opportunities in Pakistan. "Our chairman met some Pakistani high-ups. They convinced him that this was the place to invest in. So 'Aa came down." Well, how is it? "Some fast talkers they must be, he said of the Pakistan's official salesmen. "'Aa will sink dough into the Gulf of Mexico before 'Aa invest good money over here." Like most American businessmen, this gentleman was down-to-earth in his reasoning. Sardar Farooq Ahmed Khan Leghari would do well to hear him out before going off again on the hunt for another Asian Tiger.

"The elements are here; material (he represents a garment conglomerate), labour, enough skill for us to train people, and the wharf. We can bring in the machinery okay, and the designs, and train the supervisors. But this place is gonna be on vacation all the

Essential Statistics For Social Research Michael Malec,2018-10-08 We need only scan a newspaper or magazine turn on a news broadcast or open a

sociology text or journal to see that we live in an age that is heavily dependent on statistical information The extent this dependency is such that it is rather difficult to be an educated person without having at least a passing acquaintance with basic statistics More to the point it is virtually impossible to be a capable social scientist without having a definite if elementary understanding of some basic statistics and statistical methods of analysis But a casual acquaintance with a few simple statistics will not serve the social scientist who attempts to read competently the literature of the field And if one wishes to do quantitative social research and most research published today is quantitative a more thorough knowledge of statistics is imperative The aspiring sociologist need only examine the books and articles that are being published today for evidence of this claim A very large portion of the articles published in the major sociology journals use some form of statistical analysis Some of these articles and other works published sociologists are incomprehensible without a statistics background others will simply be read less intelligently or with a lessened sense of appreciation or criticism

Tyner,2012-05-02 Direct interpersonal violence is a pervasive yet often mundane feature of our day to day lives paradoxically violence is both ordinary and extraordinary Violence in other words is often hidden in plain sight Space Place and Violence seeks to uncover that which is too apparent to critically question both violent geographies and the geographies of violence. With a focus on direct violence this book situates violent acts within the context of broader political and structural conditions. Violence it is argued is both a social and spatial practice. Adopting a geographic perspective Space Place and Violence provides a critical reading of how violence takes place and also produces place. Specifically four spatial vignettes home school streets and community are introduced designed so that students may think critically how race sex gender and class inform violent geographies and geographies of violence.

Metropolis Philip Kerr, 2020-05-05 In his final book New York Times bestselling author Philip Kerr treats readers to his beloved hero's origins exploring Bernie Gunther's first weeks on Berlin's Murder Squad. Summer 1928 Berlin a city where nothing is verboten. In the night streets political gangs wander looking for fights. Daylight reveals a beleaguered populace barely recovering from the postwar inflation often jobless reeling from the reparations imposed by the victors. At central police HQ the Murder Commission has its hands full. A killer is on the loose and though he scatters many clues each is a dead end. It's almost as if he is taunting the cops. Meanwhile the press is having a field day. This is what Bernie Gunther finds on his first day with the Murder Commission. He's been taken on because the people at the top have noticed him they think he has the makings of a first rate detective. But not just yet. Right now he has to listen and learn. Metropolis is a tour of a city in chaos of its seedy sideshows and sex clubs of the underground gangs that run its rackets and its bewildered citizens the lost the homeless the abandoned. It is Berlin as it edges toward the new world order that Hitler will soon usher in. And Bernie He's a quick study and he's learning a lot. Including to his chagrin that when push comes to shove he isn't much better than the gangsters in doing whatever he must to get what he wants.

Shapiro, 2022-05-17 The New York Times bestselling author of The Art Forger delivers a spellbinding and moving novel about what we hang on to what we might need to let go and how unexpected events can lead us to deeper truths. Six people six secrets six different backgrounds. They would never have met if not for their connection to the Metropolis Storage Warehouse in Cambridge Massachusetts. When someone falls down an elevator shaft at the facility each becomes caught up in an intensifying chain of events. We meet Serge an unstable but brilliant street photographer who lives in his storage unit which overflows with thousands of undeveloped pictures. Marta an undocumented immigrant finishing her dissertation and hiding from ICE. Liddy an abused wife and mother who recreates her children's bedroom in her unit. Jason a former corporate lawyer now practicing in the facility. Rose the office manager who takes illegal kickbacks to let renters live in the building and Zach the building's owner and an ex drug dealer who scans Serge's photos as he searches for clues to the accident. But was it an accident? A murder attempt? Suicide? As her characters dip in and out of one another's lives, trying to find answers and battling societal forces beyond their control, B.A. Shapiro both questions the myth of the American dream and builds tension to an exhilarating climax. Taut and emotional, Metropolis is impossible to put down and impossible to forget.      The Century, 1926
