Abstract Understanding communicative action requires bridging two worlds: the world of social actors with the purposes, concerns, and 'goals' that motivate their actions, and the world of discourse in which everyday actors' goals are expressed and inferred. This paper overviews two distinct approaches to building that bridge, discourse studies and communicative goal studies, highlighting the strengths and limitations of each approach. In addition, we overview each of the papers in the volume showing how each contributes to and extends one approach while raising challenges to the other.

In the spring of 1988 Temple University held its annual Discourse Analysis Conference, on the issue of 'Multiple Goals in Face-to-Face Interaction'. In response to a call for papers outlining a set of motivating questions, scholars from an array of disciplinary backgrounds submitted and subsequently presented topically relevant work. The conference theme had apparently tapped ongoing concerns of a diversity of researchers. The questions and assumptions central to the conference — how discourse and goals were, and should be linked; that communicators often, if not always, had more than one purpose — implicitly undergird many specific issues in the study of face-to-face communication. All participants recognised the centrality of these concerns but what became apparent during conference dialogue were the differences in the way these concerns were being addressed. Conference attenders problematised or took-for-granted different issues, asked fundamentally different questions, and disagreed about the desired end-goals of research. As a consequence of these differences, there were many heated exchanges, some of which were notable only for their heat, but many of which produced light as well: illuminating issues, generating new definitions, suggesting better starting assumptions.

Multiple Goals In Discourse:

Multiple Goals in Discourse Karen Tracy, Nikolas Coupland, 1990 The studies in this monograph share two common features a recognition of the intertwined nature of goal and discourse and a recognition that people typically have more than one goal when they talk with others It is essential that goals and discourse be conceived of as intertwined concepts if talk is conceived as essentially a mode of action then these actions will often be taken in the pursuance of objectives Correspondingly if we assume that people approach many social episodes with specific designs ambitions wishes probably also misgivings and avoidances then it seems natural to look at talk as at least a potential goal fulfillment mechanism

Single Vs. Multiple Goals John S. K. Ng, 1993

Coalescent Argumentation Michael A. Gilbert, 2013-11-05

Coalescent Argumentation is based on the concept that arguments can function from agreement rather than disagreement To prove this idea Gilbert first discusses how several components emotional visceral physical and kisceral intuitive are utilized in an argumentative setting by people everyday These components also characterized as modes are vital to argumentative communication because they affect both the argument and the resulting outcome In addition to the components modes this book also stresses the goals in argumentation as a means for understanding one s own and one s opposer s positions Gilbert argues that by viewing positions as complex human events involving a variety of communicative modes we are better able to find commonalities across positions and therefore move from conflict to resolution By focusing on agreement and shared goals in all modes arguers can coalesce diverse positions and more easily distinguish between minor or unrelated differences and core disagreements This permits much greater latitude for locating shared beliefs values and attitudes that will lead to conflict resolution

Practical Reasoning Dov M. Gabbay, 1996-05-21 This book constitutes the refereed proceedings of the International Conference on Formal and Applied Practical Reasoning FAPR 96 held in Bonn Germany in June 1996 The 51 revised full papers included in the book together with eight posters were carefully selected for presentation at the conference The book addresses current aspects of the highly interdisciplinary area of practical reasoning in artificial intelligence philosophy psychology linguistics software engineering intelligent systems and industrial applications Among the topics addressed are user modeling belief legal reasoning argumentation dialogue logic default reasoning analogy metareasoning temporal and procedural reasoning and many others

Handbook of Communication and Aging Research

Jon F. Nussbaum, Justine Coupland, 2004-04-12 This second edition of the Handbook of Communication and Aging Research captures the ever changing and expanding domain of aging research Since it was first recognized that there is more to social aging than demography gerontology has needed a communication perspective Like the first edition this handbook sets out to demonstrate that aging is not only an individual process but an interactive one The study of communication can lead to an understanding of what it means to grow old We may age physiologically and chronologically but our social aging how we behave as social actors toward others and even how we align ourselves with or come to understand the signs of difference or change as we age are phenomena achieved primarily through communication experiences Synthesizing the vast amount of research that has been published on communication and aging in numerous international outlets over the last three decades the book's contributors include scholars from North America and the United Kingdom who are active researchers in the perspectives covered in their particular chapter Many of the chapters work to deny earlier images of aging as involving normative decrement to provide a picture of aging as a process of development involving positive choices and providing new opportunities A recurring theme in many chapters is that of the heterogeneity of the group of people who are variously categorized as older aged elderly or over 65 The contributors review the literature analytically in a way that reveals not only current theoretical and methodological approaches to communication and aging research but also sets the future agenda This handbook will be of great interest to scholars and researchers in gerontology developmental psychology and communication and in this updated edition will continue to play a key role in the study of communication and aging

Argumentation in Political Deliberation Marcin Lewiński, Dima Mohammed, 2015-07-15 The goal of this volume is to further the examination of the role shape and quality of argumentation in political deliberation The chapters collected in the volume employ the concepts and methods developed within argumentation theory to investigate the specifics of political discourse across various deliberative arenas from debates in the European Parliament consensus conferences and public hearings in France discussions in Dutch online forums to exchanges of comments in online versions of British newspapers In this way the studies reveal the inner workings of argumentative interactions that constitute deliberative discourse and thus importantly contribute to the study of public deliberation This should be of interest to the students of argumentation deliberation and political discourse In addition the volume problematizes and theorizes some vital issues related to the study of situated argumentation thus advancing the study of argumentation in context Originally published in Journal of Argumentation in Context Vol 2 1 2013 Journal of Asian Pacific Communication ,1991 Proceedings of the Twenty-second Annual Conference of the Cognitive Science Society Lila R.
