Painting For The Market:

Painting for the Market Filip Vermeulen, 2003 This study examines the process of commercialization of art which took place in Antwerp during the long sixteenth century an era of rapid expansion of both the city's economy and its art market The key development that explains the success of Antwerp as an export center for the arts lies not only in the strength of the Antwerp economy and the artistic tradition of the Southern Netherlands but specifically in the shift from ordering artwork on commission to the production for the open market The outbreak of the Dutch Revolt during the last third of the sixteenth century severely disrupted the economy of the Southern Netherlands and as a result the Antwerp art market collapsed in the mid 1580s

the essays offer a reflection on what takes to research art markets which includes addressing difficult topics such as the nature of the research questions and the data available to us and the conceptual aspects of art markets in order to define and operationalize variables and to interpret visual and statistical patterns for scholarship In our view this discussion is enriched when also taking into account how to use shared or interoperable ontologies and vocabularies to define concepts and relationships that facilitate the use and exchange of linked open data for cultural heritage and historical research A

The Development of the Art Market in England Thomas M Bayer, John R Page, 2011-03-01 European art markets did not evolve simultaneously Instead their growth was often fragmented and haphazard The exception was England which in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries witnessed the development of a modern art market uninterrupted by wars on native soil and aided by relatively steady economic growth As art emerged as an exchangeable commodity dealers and institutions were forced to improve their respective exchange qualifications and the unprecedented explosion of styles that started in the latter part of the nineteenth century can be attributed to the influence of the institutional art dealer This book gives a comprehensive account of the history and underlying economics of the modern art market in eighteenth and nineteenth century Britain Bayer and Page argue that economics shaped and developed visual culture to the extent that we should no longer restrict market issues to narrative discussions of dealers involvements in the careers of specific artists Economic econometric and statistical analyses of two specifically created and particularly rich data sets that record over 42 000
