Phenomenological Aspects of Wittgenstein's Philosophy B.-C. Park, 2012-12-06 In his writings around 1930 Wittgenstein relates his philosophy in different ways to the idea of phenomenology. He indicates that his main philosophical project had earlier been the construction of a purely phenomenological language and even after having given up this project he believed that the world we live in is the world of sense data that is of phenomenological objects. However a problem is posed by the fact that he does not appear ever to have given a full explicit account of what he means by his phenomenology phenomenological language or phenomenological problems. In this book I have tried to unravel the nature of Wittgenstein's phenomenology and to examine its importance for his entire work in philosophy. Phenomenology can be characterized as philosophy whose primary concern is what is immediately given in one's experience. This immediately given is not merely impressions inside one's mind but includes also the part of objective reality that impinges upon one's consciousness. Thus an aim of phenomenological enterprise is to grasp this objective reality by attending to immediate experience. Husserl's phenomenology is in fact a case in point.
