Margins in the Classroom Kostas Myrsiades,Linda S. Myrsiades,1994 Certainty was first published in 1981 Minnesota Archive Editions uses digital technology to make long unavailable books once again accessible and are published unaltered from the original University of Minnesota Press editions Philosophers have traditionally used two strategies to refute the sceptical that empirical knowledge is not possible because our beliefs cannot be adequately justified One strategy rejects the sceptics position because it conflicts with the supposedly obvious claim that we do have knowledge The other defends an analysis of knowledge limited to a weak set of necessary and sufficient conditions of knowledge or limited to a set of conditions specifically designed to be immune to sceptical attack In Certainty A Refutation of Scepticism Peter D Klein uses a third strategy He argues that scepticism can be refuted even if it is granted to the sceptics that knowledge entails absolute certainty The argument for his thesis has two parts He identifies the various types of scepticism and shows that the arguments for them depend upon epistemic principles which when examined carefully are unable to support the sceptical conclusions Klein then argues contrary to the views of most nonsceptics that knowledge entails certainty and that some empirical beliefs are absolutely certain In the course of his argument Klein develops and defends an account of justification knowledge and certainty The result is a theory of knowledge based upon a model of justification designed to be acceptable to sceptics nonsceptics foundationalists and coherentists

Children's Literature Association Quarterly ,1996 Storytelling in a Culturally Responsive Classroom Laura A. Mitchell,2018-11-02 The authentic storytelling process gives students the opportunity to include their heritage language and culture into the learning process at school Often students separate their heritage language and culture from the school culture They do this in order to survive the complexity of living in dual worlds or perspectives Belenky et al 1986 When teachers integrate the heritage language such as storytelling into the authentic literacy processes students find that their heritage language and culture has value They discover that their teachers encourage the traditional storytelling of their own heritage stories in the classrooms among their classmates This brings the dual perspective of living in two distinct worlds together The culturally responsive teachers help to merge both the home and school culture together through authentic literacy This book describes how culturally responsive teachers learn to navigate between the heritage languages of their students and the dominant language of their curriculum and instruction They know to ask questions such as Who are the storytellers in your home and what stories do they tell you This form of questioning opens up the thinking process that shows literacy comes in more forms and processes than just a book As culturally responsive teachers invite different forms of literacy to be shared in the classroom they bring the authentic lives of storytellers into their classroom The students can retell the stories that they were told by their storytellers Through this storytelling process both the culturally responsive teachers and the students informs them about who they are how they are connect with others and how they interdependent on others Students tell stories that inform them about who they are and how they are connected with others so they will know that they are human They can live in a world of possibilities where they are interconnected with literacy and interdependent with each other in order to be human They are describing what Greene 1995 described as looking into each other s eyes in order to encourage them to tell their stories about who they are and who they hope to be Science in the Making at the Margin Jrène Rahm,2010-01-01 We know little about diverse youths engagement in science outside of school the form such engagement takes and its impact on science literacy development and identity as a potential insider to science We need to know more about why how and for whom out of school settings make a difference Science in the Making at the Margin offers some answers through an in depth and theoretically well grounded multisited ethnography of three very different out of school settings an afterschool program for girls only a youth garden program and a Math and Science Upward Bound Program Grounded in sociocultural historical theory this book explores youths meaning making of science and co constructions of new levels of understandings of science as well as how they come to position themselves in relation to science through participation in science practices at the margin The author highlights the multiplicity of learning becoming and hybridity that constitute the learning of science in the three sites studied Her analysis suggests that most youth position themselves as science users as youth who are creating with and learning through science with others in textually rich environments and situations and in ways that are meaningful to them Their identity as users of science is grounded in the forms of engagement supported by the three science practices The challenge is then to leverage such literacy beyond the practices themselves

Race in the College Classroom

Maureen T. Reddy,Bonnie TuSmith,2002 Winner of the 2003 American Educational Studies Association Critics Choice Awards Winner of the 2003 Gustavus Myers Outstanding Book Award Did affirmative action programs solve the problem of race on American college campuses as several recent books would have us believe If so why does talking about race in anything more than a superficial way make so many students uncomfortable Written by college instructors from many disciplines this volume of essays takes a bold first step toward a nationwide conversation Each of the twenty nine contributors addresses one central question what are the challenges facing a college professor who believes that teaching responsibly requires an honest and searching examination of race Professors from the humanities social sciences sciences and education consider topics such as how the classroom environment is structured by race the temptation to retreat from challenging students when faced with possible reprisals in the form of complaints or negative evaluations the implications of using standardized evaluations in faculty tenure and promotion when the course subject is intimately connected with race and the varying ways in which white faculty and faculty of color are impacted by teaching about race Teaching Race in Perilous Times Jason E. Cohen,Sharon D. Raynor,Dwayne A. Mack,2021-03-01 The college classroom is inevitably influenced by and in turn influences the world around it In the United States this means the complex topic of race can come into play in ways that are both explicit and implicit Teaching Race in Perilous Times highlights and confronts the challenges of teaching race in the United States from syllabus development and pedagogical strategies to accreditation and curricular reform Across fifteen original essays contributors draw on their experiences teaching in different institutional contexts and adopt various qualitative methods from their home disciplines to offer practical strategies for discussing race and racism with students while also reflecting on broader issues in higher education Contributors examine how teachers can respond productively to emotionally charged contexts recognize the roles and pressures that faculty assume as activists in the classroom focus a timely lens on the shifting racial politics and economics of higher education and call for a more historically sensitive reading of the pedagogies involved in teaching race The volume offers a corrective to claims following the 2016 US presidential election that the current moment is unprecedented highlighting the pivotal role of the classroom in contextualizing and responding to our perilous times
