Marriage and Marital Breakdown

2 types of general evidence suggest that the institution of marriage is in danger:

1. A decreasing number of people are getting married
2. Divorce rates are increasing.

Brenda Almond (2006) believes that family is fragmenting because there is an increased emphasis on the needs of individuals and less emphasis on society's need for the rearing of children in stable relationships. There is increasing social and legal acceptance of marital breakdown, cohabitation and gay and lesbian relationships. Almond sees the decline of family as damaging to society.

Patricia Morgan (2003) suggests that factors such as increased cohabitation, declining fertility, increase in single parenthood and childbirth outside marriage are all indicative of this decline. She also sees this as harmful for society because cohabiting couple are more likely to split up than married couple
