Patterns of Identity Emma Ronald, 2012 This thesis sets out to investigate the changing social significance of the hand block printed and resist dyed cottons of Rajasthan Once a vital part of the region's everyday rural textile and dress traditions communicating information about its wearers and demonstrating the craftsmanship of its makers today block printed textiles are produced primarily for export and tourist markets In the space of just a few decades the growing effects of globalisation have wrought irrevocable change upon this traditional craft Under the pressures of new market forces modern hand block printed textiles bear little resemblance to their traditional counterparts Drawing on an ethnographic perspective in general and an ethnomethodological perspective in particular the main objective of this thesis is to develop a deeper understanding of traditional hand block printed and resist dyed textiles with particular focus on the modernisation of traditional forms of hand block printing in Rajasthan and the various strategies and experiences which the craftspeople have undertaken to deal with the changes to the market for their products Using the recent history of block printed cloth production in Rajasthan as told by local artisans it explores the manner in which such phenomena as modernisation and globalisation are embodied by shifts in production technology design aesthetics and market forces In order to explore the rural roots and chart the dramatic recent modernisation of the craft this thesis identifies and documents the range of textiles traditionally made by the region's hereditary communities of cloth printers and dyers and investigates their role in the projection of identity exploring the changing communicative function of these textiles notably with the rise of synthetic fabrics among the rural communities of Rajasthan In doing so this thesis investigates how the consumption of hand block printed textiles has changed over the past forty years and considers the impact of the growth of export and tourism on traditions of cloth printing in the region It is a socially situated study based on extensive firsthand fieldwork with the Chhipa community of hereditary cloth printers making use of ethnography photography and personal experience of textile dyeing printing and design By developing methodologies based on the detailed documentation of the technologies materials and processes involved in hand block printing this thesis seeks to update and expand upon the existing literature on the craft by providing and analysing contemporary accounts of family traditions and modern developments in use by current generations of artisans In doing so this thesis also contributes to current discourse on the preservation of craft knowledge as a form of intangible cultural heritage The study is primarily located within the field of Indian textile and dress studies It contributes to contemporary ethnographies of textile crafts through the detailed analysis of print and dye technologies and by also considering the meanings and values of block printed cloth as clothing adds to the literature on the social role of textiles and dress with a regionally specific focus on the role of pattern and colour By focussing on the communicative functions of pattern and cloth it also enhances cross disciplinary attentions to regional identities and intangible cultural heritage Finally it engages with the very local processes of globalisation and the contemporary values of handcrafted cloth     The House Beautiful Furnishing Annual ,1925

Textile in Architecture Didem Ekici,Patricia Blessing,Basile Baudez,2023-06-30 This book investigates the interconnections between textile and architecture via a variety of case studies from the Middle Ages through the twentieth century and from diverse geographic contexts Among the oldest human technologies building and weaving have intertwined histories Textile structures go back to Palaeolithic times and are still in use today and textile furnishings have long been used in interiors Beyond its use as a material textile has offered a captivating model and metaphor for architecture through its ability to enclose tie together weave communicate and adorn Recently architects have shown a renewed interest in the textile medium due to the use of computer aided design digital fabrication and innovative materials and engineering The essays edited and compiled here work across disciplines to provide new insights into the enduring relationship between textiles and architecture The contributors critically explore the spatial and material qualities of textiles as well as cultural and political significance of textile artifacts patterns and metaphors in architecture Textile in Architecture is organized into three sections Ritual Spaces which examines the role of textiles in the formation and performance of socio political religious and civic rituals Public and Private Interiors explores how textiles transformed interiors corresponding to changing aesthetics cultural values and material practices and Materiality and Material Translations which considers textile as metaphor and model in the materiality of built environment Including cases from Morocco Samoa France India the UK Spain the Ancient Andes and the Ottoman Empire this is essential reading for any student or researcher interested in textiles in architecture through the ages

Printed Textiles Linda Eaton,2014-09-23 The Winterthur Museum's richly illustrated history of British and American fabrics made or used from 1700-1850 is a visual reference for designers and a definitive contribution to textile studies. From slipcovers that belonged to George Washington to bedhangings described by Harriet Beecher Stowe, Delaware's Winterthur Museum holds some of the finest cotton and linen textiles made or used in America and Britain between 1700 and 1850. One of the fastest growing and potentially most lucrative trades in the eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries, on the forefront of developments in science and engineering, chemistry and technology, the textile industry is a fascinating lens into international trade relations and cultural exchange over nearly two centuries. Printed Textiles is a major update to the classic text published by Winterthur in 1970, a sourcebook compiled by celebrated curator Florence Montgomery that detailed all aspects of the fabrics' lifespan, from their design and method of manufacture to their use and exchange value. Linda Eaton, Director of Collections and Senior Curator of Textiles, updates the classic with a particular focus on furnishing fabrics referred to as "furnitures." Building on research that has come to light since 1970 and benefiting from the technical and scientific expertise of the conservators and scientists at Winterthur, Eaton presents a thorough and sweeping study enriched by the diverse approaches to material culture today. With hundreds of beautifully photographed samples engagingly contextualized with iconic figures in American history including Betsy Ross and Benjamin Franklin, this significant addition to textile scholarship allows for a full appreciation of these fascinating fabrics. Printed Textiles is destined to become an essential reference for interior designers, fashion and textile design students, conservators, collectors, and anyone with an interest in the textile industry.

Indigo and Resist Dyeing Linda Brassington,2025-12-11 A contemporary textile artist provides a new unexpected and expansive anthropological perspective on the practices, meanings, and heritage of a globally important textile technique.

An Examination of the Design Style of the WPA Milwaukee Handicraft Block Printed Textiles, 1935-1944 Barbara Jean Stein,1979      Fibre & Fabric ,1911      Cotton in Context Kim Siebenhüner,2019-09-16

While cotton was a world-changing good in the early modern period for producers, merchants, and consumers, it was but one of many different fabrics. This volume explores this dichotomy by contextualizing cotton within its contemporary culture of textiles. In doing so, it focuses on a long, under-researched region: the German-speaking world, particularly Switzerland, which transformed into one of the most prolific European regions for the production of printed cottons in the eighteenth century. Sixteen contributions investigate the globally entangled history of Indiennes, silk, wool, and embroideries, giving new insights into the manufacturing, marketing, and consumption of textiles between 1500 and 1900.
