Multinational Corporations In China Benefiting From Structural Transformation:

Multinational Corporations in China Yadong Luo, 2000 The unique quality of this book as an important guide to Chinese industry today is based on the author's double experience first from his practical career in China and more recently from his academic career in the U S

BOOK JACKET China and the Multinationals R. Pearce, 2012 This original and important book explores how the interaction between China and multinational enterprises MNEs has the potential to affect the future of the Chinese economy the global economy and international business It examines the interaction of two of the most important forces affecting the development of the global economy in recent decades firstly the opening and massive growth of the Chinese economy and secondly the rise in foreign direct investment per se and the consequent strategic restructuring of major MNEs The expert contributors begin by investigating precisely how leading MNEs with well honed international practices and commitments have drawn their subsidiaries in China into their established networks They suggest that MNEs operations are increasingly embedded in the growth and sustainability of the Chinese economy itself rather than merely serving as a supply base for their global markets The second part of the book examines the emergence of new MNEs from China itself It shows how these MNEs are seen as integral to China's development and how their ability to expand reflects strengths from China's growth as well as revealing the growing needs required for sustainability This timely study will be of great interest not just to those following one of the world's key economies but also to researchers and students of the fast paced changes in international business strategy

International Brand Management of Chinese Companies Sandra Bell, 2008-03-29 China is certainly doing its best to keep the world mesmerized by its economic achievements The Chinese economic growth story that begun 30 years ago has in terms of dynamics and duration long since surpassed all those economic miracles which have brought Germany Japan and the South East Asian Tigers into the top league of the industrialized world The rapid expansion of the Chinese economy has gone along with a fledgling re integration of China into the global economic system In the course of the last 30 years China has become a major player in the global economy and today is on a trajectory towards even greater prominence In recent years the Chinese economy seems to have reached an important threshold line of economic development and global integration In the first quarter century of reform and global opening Chinese enterprises have been largely confined to a passive role in the global division of labor Foreign enterprises as the proprietors of greatly superior business models production technologies management models as well as very competitively established brands have been integrating Chinese players in their value chains and global operations Lacking the necessary production technologies products as well as marketing knowledge to successfully dress OECD consumers Chinese enterprises have been hardly able to enter the global markets without such guidance Now this constellation is changing

China's Domestic Private Firms: Anne S. Tsui, Yanjie Bian, 2014-12-18 One of the most important outcomes of market reforms in China over the past 20 years has been the emergence of a significant domestic private sector which now accounts for almost a third of China's GDP and is by far the country's most important source of employment growth. This book is the first in-depth analysis of the management and operation of these domestic private firms which are defined as companies or organizations created by PRC citizens including township enterprises and collectives. The book provides a comprehensive and multidisciplinary perspective on the factors important to the successful operation and growth of these firms. It begins with a review of the literature on the topic in three different disciplines: economics, sociology, and management, each followed by several chapters covering recent developments in these areas. Featuring contributions by distinguished scholars and China experts, the work concludes with an insightful chapter on the future of China's public sector in the global economy.

Management and International Review Niels G. Noorderhaven, 2013-06-29 units. This can be seen as an indicator of the extent to which the MNC is capable of putting its corporate level resources to work on a global scale. Becerra and Santal6 find that about ten percent of the variability of regional units is attributable to corporate effects. The more internationalized the MNC is, the stronger the corporate effect. This suggests that the more internationalized MNCs are also more successful in integrating their international operations, whether by employing worldwide home-grown advantages or by spreading over the entire organization resources and capabilities developed by a particular subsidiary. This integration within the MNC that can be assumed to be responsible for the stronger corporate effect in the more internationalized MNCs in Becerra and Santal6's sample is the focus of Mauri and Sambharya's paper. These authors study the effect of global integration on the performance of the MNC, operationalizing global integration as the inter-area product flows within the multinational. They find a non-linear relation between global integration and MNC performance. At low levels of global integration, there is a negative relation with performance, which turns positive at intermediate levels but negative again at very high levels of global integration. Their explanation is that at very low and very high levels of integration, the balance between the costs and benefits of global integration activities is negative.
