From the close valleys of thy love,
Where flowers of white and coral are,
And the soft gloom of cave and grove,
How have I wandered, spent and fat,
By fell and mountain thence forbanned,
Into this lamia-haunted land?

I could not know the coiling path,
Pebbled with sard and lazuli,
Would lead me to the desert's wrath,
The rancor of the glaring sky,
The tarts that like stirred serpents hiss,
The dens of drake and cockatrice.

I roam a limbo long abhorred,
Whose dread horizons flame and flow
Like iron from a furnace poured:
A boundless realm of sterile woe,
Where mad mirages fill the dawn
With roses lost and fountains gone.

O land where dolent monsters mate!
I know the lusts that howl and run
When the red stones reverberate
The soot-black lecheries that wait
From Hinnom to the moons of bale.

What desert naiads, amorous,
Have drawn me to their sunken strand?
How many a desert succubus
Has clasped me on her couch of sand?
What tresses foul, with breast nor face,
Have seemed to bear thy beauty's grace!

What voices have besought me there
With sweet illusion of thine own,
Luring me, rapt and unaware,
To pits where dying demons moan!
What marble limbs have gleamed as thine—
Slow-sinking into sand or brine!

Briefly, in desert hermitages,
I have lain down in my despair,
Dreaming to sleep as slept the sages:
But unseen lust oppressed the air,
And crimson dreams of incubi,
And thirst of anthropophagi.

22

Entire, from mountains scaled at noon,
I scan the realm of my distress:
Deep-cloven plain and nippled dune,
Like to some sleeping giantess,
Pale and supine, by gods desired
With hearts deliriously fired.

Still without respite, I must follow
Where the faint, exile rills bequeath
Their bitterness to gulf and hollow,
Still the blown dusts of ruin breathie,
Fretting my face. My feet return
By salt-bright shores that blind and burn.

Silence immeasurable creeps
Across my path. . . . My sharpened ears
Are dinned with tumult from the deeps,
Are frayed by whispers of the spheres;
And darkly, in the sepulchre,
I hear the strident dead confer.

Gnawed by unceasing solitude,
The secret veils of sight grow thin:
High Domes that dazzle and elude,
Columns of darkling god and djinn
Appear; and things forbidden seem
Unsealed as in some awful dream.

My heart, consumed yet unconsuming,
Burns like a dreadful, ardent sun.
The horror of strange nights illumining:
Shall yet I find the ways foregone,
And speak, before the heart of thee,
The still-remembered Sesame?

Elizabeth Bishop and Translation Mariana Machova,2016-11-28 The book examines the relationship between translation and original creation in the works of the American poet Elizabeth Bishop suggesting that translation can be seen as a poetic principle which can be related to the poet's original works too The book offers a detailed discussion of all the translation projects Bishop undertook throughout her life from Ancient Greek French Portuguese and Spanish both published and unpublished They are seen in the context of her life and work and analyzed with particular regard for the features which are relevant in relationship to Bishop's own works Bishop's work as a translator has not been explored thoroughly yet despite the huge critical interest in Bishop in the last decades and one of the aim of the book is to offer such exploration The second part of the book focuses on the ways Bishop's interest in translation and her experience of a translator is manifested in her original works Bishop's poems are read with particular attention paid to the features which relate them to translation particularly the complex interaction between the foreign and the familiar which is examined not only in her poems dealing with exotic places namely Brazil but also in texts dealing with more familiar topics and locations The final chapter argues that a crucial role in Bishop's works is played by the unknown that which is impossible to understand and translate fully The book also suggests that on a more general level a type of poetics which shares certain key features with translation could be defined
