Excerpt from Outlines of Psychology This little book does not pretend to be a treatise upon psychology but an outline of principles logically arranged so that the student of psychology and of the theory of teaching may use it as a guide book in directing his investigations upon this subject Definitions and principles are not here extensively elucidated but the facts of the science are plainly stated in their relation to each other with ample suggestions to the student who desires to make further investigations It has been the aim of the author to incorporate the cardinal principles that underlie all empirical psychology and to show the inseparable relationship existing between these principles and the successful practice of the teacher As science is knowledge properly classified it has been the aim of the author to show the co ordination and subordination of every topic suggesting also the order in which each should be studied That there is a philosophy of education is now generally admitted though not universally The application of universal principles to teaching is based upon such a philosophy To aid the young teacher to discover and realize that psychology is not an isolated science the author has appended other outlines and suggestive articles showing the application of psychological principles About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books Find more at www.forgottenbooks.com This book is a reproduction of an important historical work Forgotten Books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy In rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition We do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works

Psychology ... Henry Graham Williams, 1894 Outlines on the History of Psychology Max Dessoir, 1912 In the earliest times the soul was an object of interest from three points of view One of these was the religious It is clear that religious needs even in their most primitive form must lead to the development of ideas of a separate invisible being the soul Another conception of the soul originates from the very primitive experience that a principle of activity is at work within the human body So long as a man lives and indeed only during this time certain vital forces are active within him which reveal themselves in perception and motion These forces are identified with the soul A third standpoint has always been present in the observations which every one must make on his own character and on that of his fellowmen This observation of one's self and others personality is psychognosis The history of the attempts at such self knowledge began in ancient times and changed when scientific investigations took precedence Since however these efforts have appeared only in recent times and since we have chosen in the interest of historical objectivity to mark off our task at an earlier point it will be impossible to trace this development further Introduction PsycINFO Database Record c 2010 APA all rights reserved Outlines of Psychology Josiah Royce, 1916 Outlines of Psychology Hermann Lotze, 1886
