European financial regulation and supervision and the onslaught of the financial crisis

Veronica Hagenfeldt,2011-04-01 Scientific Essay from the year 2009 in the subject Law European and International Law Intellectual Properties grade Distinction University of Edinburgh School of Law course Regulatory governance in the European Union language English abstract The aim of this paper is threefold first to establish how the regulatory and supervisory architecture has evolved in Europe over the last decade second to determine how the shortcomings of the present system affected the onslaught of the financial crisis in Europe and lastly to evaluate whether the proposed regulatory and supervisory reforms are likely to successfully repair these weaknesses Part I identifies that the single market objective combined with the significant integration of European financial services provided the major impetus for bringing about reform to the regulatory and supervisory architecture of Europe By investigating the Financial Services Action Plan FSAP and the implementation of the Lamfalussy Process this paper illustrates that the member states and the EU institutions sought to achieve a flexible regulatory and supervisory structure marked by cooperation and convergence towards common standards However despite the commendable progress made Part II shows that the regulatory and supervisory system has not kept pace with the financial integration and that the current crisis revealed substantial inadequacies of the present system This paper will demonstrate that the weaknesses in the European financial regulatory and supervisory architecture acted both as contributing causes of the crisis and as exacerbating factors. In particular the essay identifies three such shortcomings that aggravated the crisis namely that the current system caused a breakdown in member state cooperation and coordination that it is marked by inconsistency and that it lacks a sufficiently developed EU dimension. Lastly Part III investigates the proposed regulatory and supervisory reforms that the de Larosi re Report brought forth. The Report makes recommendations for extensive reform and it is submitted that not only are these reforms likely to cure many of the current cooperation and convergence problems but they would also equip Europe with a partially centralised supervisory structure that would help prevent future crises of similar cataclysmic proportions.

International Financial Market Regulation Benn Steil, 1994. International Financial Market Regulation Edited by Benn Steil. Regulation is one of the biggest issues facing banks, securities houses and financial markets worldwide. There have been enormous developments in regulation in the EC, the US and internationally and many of these are ongoing. In the US the Securities and Exchange Commission's Market 2000 report is again calling widespread attention to market structure issues and the possibility of further regulatory reform. This book contains the first major critical analysis of the Market 2000 report. It provides timely and incisive analysis of international regulatory developments by economists who are intimately familiar with the major changes in train. Their analysis will not only continue to be relevant for years after publication but should actually serve to mould contemporary debate on policy.

International Monetary and Financial Issues for the 1990s, 1996 Financial Markets in Transition Lars Oxelheim, 1996. Looks at the process of transition from independent national financial markets to a more integrated globalized market and the key factors that lie behind growth change and competitive success. Capital Account Regulations and Macroeconomic Policy Carlos Budnevis L., 1997.

The Role of Industrial Country Policies in Emerging Market Crises Jeffrey A. Frankel, Nouriel Roubini, 2001. This paper considers policies of the industrialized countries as they pertain to crises in emerging markets. These fall into three areas: 1. their own macroeconomic policies which determine the global financial environment; 2. their role in responding to crises when they occur particularly through rescue packages which have three components: reforms in debtor countries, public funds from creditor countries and private sector involvement; and 3. efforts to reform the international financial architecture with the aim of lessening the frequency and severity of future crises. A recurrent theme is the tension between mitigating crises that occur and the moral hazard that such efforts create in the longer term. In addition to reviewing these three areas of policy we consider the institutions through which the more powerful countries exercise their influence. We conclude with a discussion of the debate over the sins of the International Monetary Fund and proposals for reform.
