

SHARED IDEALS

Although I received no religious instruction, the singing of the birds and the beauty of the rivers and mountains of my homeland led me to believe in the existence of a Creator, and I wanted to get to know more about religion. One day an Opus Dei center opened near where I lived. There I could find information, ask questions, read. And I learned to pray. Within a few years, though not a Christian, I decided to become a Cooperator, for I shared the ideals of those who were teaching young people what I would have liked to learn in my youth: how to get to know God and live a noble life, a life of work, understanding and respect for others, and healthy entertainment. After a few years I was baptized. The message of St. Josemaría helps me sanctify my work, which takes place largely in a garden among the flowers. When I am watering or fertilizing, I think about how greatly God cares for me, and when the flowers are opening and blooming, I pray for the spiritual growth of all men and women.

Yedik Almasbekovich Mamrainov

lives in Almaty, Kazakhstan, and works as a gardener and maintenance man.

RELATIVES AND FRIENDS

I've heard that Cooperators are like the relatives and friends of the faithful of Opus Dei, and that is exactly what I want to be. In regard to spiritual help, I benefit from and share in the formation offered by the Prelature, and on my part, I unite my prayers and other contributions to those of other Cooperators to help the Work.

Marie Jones

lives in Leatherhead, Surrey, England. She is married and has three children.

GIVING ENCOURAGEMENT TO THE SICK

I've known Opus Dei for over thirty years, and became a Cooperator last year. I'm a social worker and try to give encouragement to the sick. I was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis in 1991 and was told I had seven years to live. The illness has worsened over the years and now it is a great effort just to take a few steps; recently, I lost the ability to read or write. However, despite the medical prognosis, I have lived almost twenty years since I was diagnosed. I don't think I have a vocation to Opus Dei, but I do feel connected to the Work, as if I were part of the family. I am greatly helped by the message of the sanctification of ordinary life. Everything I do, although it may seem trivial, relates to God and has an infinite value. That seems marvelous to me.

Christoph Flaspöhrer

lives in Wachtberg near Bonn, Germany. He is a social worker who previously worked in banking.
