Meeting Challenges, Measuring Progress Douglas F. Barnes, Hussain Samad, Salvador Rivas, 2018-11-14 Energy access is an essential prerequisite for economic social and human development The 2015 United Nations Sustainable Development Goals SDGs explicitly recognized affordable and clean energy as a key factor in development alongside education and poverty alleviation The UN Sustainable Energy for All initiative SEforALL mobilizes international donors countries and the private sector to help people in developing countries gain access to modern energy services To assist in support of SEforALL goals this joint study of the Inter American Development Bank IDB and the United Nations Development Programme UNDP provides a comprehensive review of energy poverty policies and programs in Latin America and the Caribbean LAC This report measures the progress and impact of energy access programs and also documents the experience of successful projects This study reviews cutting edge methodologies to assist in program design shares of experiences of successful programs and develops a vision for reaching sustainable energy for all in the LAC region With electricity coverage at more than 96 percent LAC is close to becoming the world's first developing region to achieve universal access to electricity Despite recent progress within LAC there are still substantial pockets of energy poverty Approximately 21.8 million people are without electricity access More than 80 million people rely on firewood and charcoal for cooking that is burned in fuel inefficient primitive stoves These traditional cooking technologies emit a significant amount of indoor air pollution IAP which has been linked to respiratory illnesses and adverse environmental impacts Thus in addition to promoting electricity energy access programs also might give priority to the promotion of cleaner methods cooking by making available better stoves and cleaner burning fuels at reasonable costs The report also explores ways to measure energy poverty and monitor energy access in developing countries The accuracy and effectiveness of tools such as the IEA's household energy data efforts and the Global Tracking Framework depend on collecting information through standardized national surveys Approaches to measure energy poverty and monitor energy access have increasingly focused on the provision of energy services such as lighting space conditioning and cooking The transition from low quality energy services to more modern forms can be accomplished in different ways As households in developing countries adopt electricity and clean methods of cooking they benefit from higher quality lower cost and convenient to use appliances However measuring the societal and developmental benefits of energy investments though difficult is important Two basic approaches have evolved over the years to measure the benefits of energy access i consumer surplus and ii regression based techniques The consumer surplus approach evaluates the economic benefits of energy services through measuring increased demand resulting from lower costs of such energy end uses such as lighting radio and television When possible rigorous impact evaluation techniques based on multivariate models can be used to more directly measure the socioeconomic benefits associated with energy access and modern energy services including higher income and improved education In recent years new approaches for meeting the requirements of modern and sustainable energy services have emerged Due to technical and market changes new types of equipment have become available for providing energy services to rural areas In LAC three basic models have been developed to provide rural populations with electricity service i main grid extension ii community networks and iii individual home based systems including clean cookstoves Family Planning: Meeting Challenges, Promoting Choices R.L. Kleinman,P. Senanayake,1993-11-15 This volume reviews the recent advances that have taken place in family planning techniques and looks in detail at the social and other considerations involved in developing effective family planning programmes Based on the special 40th Anniversary Congress of the International Planned Parenthood Federation the book contains a wide range of expert contributions by leading workers in the field from around the world
