

Managing risks of exposure to solvents in the workplace

What's the Risk?

- Solvent vapours can be inhaled or absorbed through the skin, passing into the blood stream. Contaminated food or hands can also lead to solvents being swallowed.

- Short term exposure to solvents can irritate eyes, lungs and skin and may cause headaches, nausea, dizziness and light-headedness.
- Exposure to high concentrations of solvent vapours can result in loss of consciousness or may be fatal.

- Using automated systems
- Separating the solvent and workers by enclosing or isolating the task, and
- Using ventilation to minimise the vapour concentration in a worker's breathing zone

If elimination is not possible then exposure can be minimised by:

- using chemicals with less toxic ingredients
- Using low-volatility solvents or water based solvent substitutes, or
- Changing the way the task is conducted e.g., applying the solvent at a lower temperature so less vapour is released.
