Employment, Peripheral Activities, and Development Diana Hunt, 1983 The paper contends that given rural attributes of the informal sector, much insight into the mechanisms that determine employment and travel in this sector can be obtained from a study of travel pattern in rural areas. The case study of Kanakapura Bangalore district shows where income of households is at a subsistence level, travel is a luxury item. People travel more as measured by distance travelled for reasons other than stemming from their main economic activity agriculture. Under these circumstances, transport provision will be secondary to the implementation of general development programmes which help to raise incomes Regardless of the small size of the sample in the pilot study it is hypothesised that resolution of the issue of which pattern of transport is appropriate for the informal sector will depend upon the type of economy If the economy is of the subsistence type then questions of transport provision do not have the urgency that transport planners accord to it Burnett V.
