Window Light Portraits

Opposite page: Dark, natural light on the side of the building creates a dramatic, moody atmosphere with a low-key light on the opposite side.

At the bottom: Window light photo. "Window light" was taken at the side of this place with a camera that is oriented to the left with the window directly in the center. The window is very bright, so the camera is set to a slow shutter speed to reduce the overexposure. The subject is a dark, solid-colored wall, making the window look like a bright sunburst and a square frame filtering through the frame.
