

Simple lighting techniques

Start your projects off with these effective lighting recipes

HIGH CONTRAST LIGHT AT 90°

A horridly results achieved with unmodified light. Using a single flash placed at this angle can create sunburning results, though. The bright and sharp-edged highlights lack texture and create stark shadows and bright highlights. Without a diffuser, the quality of light will be high contrast and if placed near the subject it will create problems with fall-off where light is spread unevenly across the face. By using a reflector, shadows will be deep.

DIFFUSED LIGHT AND REFLECTOR

This is a much better set-up where the same light source is softened with a diffuser and a reflector. Diffusers give their softer effect as daylight cloud covers, spreading light from a single source into larger area. The diffuser will reduce the intensity of your flash unit, so you may need to dial up the output of the flash head, but the effect will be more flattering. The reflector works by bouncing some light back onto the left side of the face.

HIGH CONTRAST LIGHT AT 45°

With a 45-degree angle to the side of the shot, this type of lighting reveals the hidden side of your subject's face. Placed at this angle, the subject's profile is cast in deep shadow. Positioned at this angle, acute angles, this light won't pick up as much skin texture, but it won't give the face an angry kind of flattening aspect, regardless of the pose. Only one half of the face will be illuminated and, without any reflector, the other half will become a silhouette.

HIGH CONTRAST AT 45° WITH REFLECTOR

A much better blend of lighting set-up that reveals the three-dimensional characteristics of the face. Used in conjunction with a reflector, there is bright and reflection, which is rarely the case with unmodified lighting, when the subject is illuminated from one side only. This is a great way to create a high-contrast look, while still maintaining a soft, even lighting. It's a great way to create a soft, even lighting, and it's great for portraits.

LOW CONTRAST AT 45° WITH REFLECTOR

With the addition of a diffuser to the side of an unmodified camera, this kind of side light is much lower contrast than when previous, like examples. This creates a longer band of soft-edged light, which makes this portrait much more even and even distribution. For further results, use a circular柔化器, place a reflector behind the subject to bounce light onto the shadow side of the face. An unmodified flash will create a strong source for a soft-focus and even the portrait's shadows to give range of light.

RIM LIGHTING FROM BEHIND

This is a method for emphasizing the positive perimeter or shape of your subject's face. In this technique, the subject is not lit from the front, but from behind to create a shadowing rim light effect. Only a single light source is needed and can result in a rim light that can make the subject look like a halo. The perimeter that each frame is creating as a diffuser, opens up the aperture and makes it a good idea to use a reflector to bounce light into the side of the model to bounce light back into the face.
