

Managing service Quality

- The service quality of a firm is tested at each service encounter. If service personnel are bored, cannot answer simple questions, or visiting with each other while customers are waiting, customers will think twice about doing business again with that seller.
- Customer expectations: customers form service expectations from many sources, such as past experiences, word of mouth, and advertising. Customers compare the perceived service with the expected service. If the perceived service falls below the expected service, customers are disappointed.
- If the perceived service meets or exceeds their expectations, they are suitable to use the provider again. Successful companies add benefits to their offering that not only satisfy customers but surprise and delight them.

gives a summary on the results of this work Managing Service Quality Paul Kunst, Jos Lemmink, 1997-06-28 This book contains a variety of theory based and practice driven approaches for improving service quality. Among these approaches are the notion that core service can only lead to customer evaluations ranging from neutral to dissatisfied. The book also includes practical information on measurement instruments for service quality in railway services, tourism, universities, advertising agencies and accountants and methods for providing help and support for managers who want to measure service quality in their own organizations. It advocates that service processes and immediate campaign results of advertising agencies are the most important drivers for quality perception of business customers throughout the whole business relationship. Other approaches discussed are hands on instruments for business to business market research such as the customer value workshop for identifying the key customer values and a new self organizing approach to service planning.

Service Quality and Management Bernd Stauss, Jos Lemmink, Paul Kunst, 2013-06-29 Introduction Are services millennium proof? Certainly not. At least not at this moment. There is no thorough research needed to derive that conclusion simply ask around. The evidence is overwhelming. True horror stories exist of all types of services in all types of sectors. It is even becoming a business in itself. Television shows that are based on customer complaints about services are becoming more and more popular. As is the case in the millennium problem management of service companies experiences a lot of problems in the hardware and the software of services. There are still problems in defining and developing the service and problems in creating, realizing and managing well defined services. Is there then no progress at all? We believe there is. The enormous attention for services has its advantages as well. In various places innovations are realized and what is more important are linked to theory. Only in this way learning becomes possible. Eventually innovative practice will reflect in the development of theory and in turn good practice will be based on solid theory. This series tries to support this process by presenting a number of innovative practices and examples of testing theory in service quality marketing and management.
