Managing Rural Development with Small Farmer Participation Coralie Bryant, Louise G. White, 1984 Information, Management and Participation Francesco di Notarbartolo Villarosa, 2005-08-02 In order to alleviate poverty people oriented projects those dealing with activities such as institutional development health family planning education and rural development must be well targeted towards the most vulnerable groups However official top down information is incapable of identifying prioritising and marking out these groups at a local level and the result is too often an unfair inefficient and ineffective allocation and use of the resources of social programmes The author argues that a process approach is often necessary to generate relevant knowledge about local needs especially in poor urban and heterogeneous areas. Such an approach fosters flexibility and adaptability to the local context. The book analyses the whole approach to information handling which was developed in the Brazilian project. The different phases are analysed: the collection and processing of data and the construction of an information system to be used for decision making.

Agency for International Development, 1982      The Management of Projects Peter W. G. Morris, 1994 This book will undoubtedly become one of the classics of the project management literature. There will be a growing need for project managers who can look beyond the internal processes of their projects to the organisational, technological and socio-economic contexts in which projects must be managed. A good starting point would be for all project managers to read this book.

Construction Management and Economics      Autonomous Development Raff Carmen, 1996-02-05 At a time of widespread disillusion as to what development has in practice done to the lives of hundreds of millions of marginalised people over the past 40 years, this book seeks to reclaim development as a project of people's own autonomous agency. Born out of three decades of field experience and working with Third World students, it revisits the primary question of what development ought really to be about. Raff Carmen starts from the conviction that development is too important to be left to the developers. He critically examines what has gone on under its name, finding it wanting both as an epistemological category and a sound operational practice. Instead, he presents a counter view of development as an act of creation whereby people exercise their inalienable right to invent their own future as authors of an ongoing process of transforming and humanising the landscapes they inhabit.

Horizons, 1983      Rural Development Participation Review, 1979      Participatory Approaches to Development Trinidad S. Osteria, Jonathan Y. Jones, Jones Merrick, David Richards, 1993 Presents case studies of African organizations reflecting the themes of strategy, structure change and conflicts and managing people. Includes exercises aimed at helping to practise skills and experience the processes surrounding central features of management.
