Decolonization and the Other Sharon C. Sewell, 2010-04-16

In 1962 Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago became independent countries Barbados followed in 1966 In the years leading up to these events the history of the British West Indies was written largely by the British the colonial power who focused on the process of decolonization and the key local players involved After independence local scholars also focused on the role of political leaders in the newly independent countries To date scholars have paid little attention to the impact of these events on the local populations of these islands Decolonization and the Other The Case of the British West Indies explores the local perspectives on and reactions to events by using West Indian literature to supplement the historical record Beginning in the 1930s when local demands for political participation increased through the process of decolonization and into the early years of independence West Indian writers used their life experiences to document local reaction West Indian literature first appeared in 1950 when British publishers became interested in island authors and their novels By using the novels to supplement the historical record we can gain a better understanding of the process of decolonization and the early years of independence in the British West Indies present for urbanized characters primarily in Africa and India The reader will also have the rare pleasure of discovering Janice Kulik Keefer's Fox her version of what she calls in her commentary displaced autobiography or creative non fiction Lastly an extensive bibliography on the postcolonial short story opens up further possibilities for research
