Parental Involvement In Childrens Reading:

The Role of the Parent in the School Reading Program Stanley Clayton Pickett,1983 Parental Involvement in Children's Reading Keith Topping,Sheila Wolfendale,2017-11-28 Parental involvement in children s education is a subject of growing interest and recent legislation in both the UK and USA has given formal recognition of parents rights Learning to read is an obvious area where parents can do a great deal to help and some schools have had programmes for parental involvement in reading for some time However recent research has shown the considerable benefit in having carefully structured systems for parental involvement This book presents a review of past and current good practice in this field Details of a wide range of schemes developed in local areas are given in a series of short contributed papers which are grouped into sub sections of Part 2 according to the type of project Part 3 is essentially a manual of materials and methods The emphasis throughout the book is on service delivery to all children although there is of course considerable discussion of remedial reading and children with special needs The book should appeal to a wide audience in education educational administration and educational psychology

An Empirical Study on Parental Involvement in Children's Reading Development Jaclyn Ann Rosolowski,2003 Published literature has shown that parents are influential in the life of a child and are looked upon as being the child s first teacher Their involvement in the child s education should not stop when the child begins school but should be continued An empirical study was conducted using the Stanford Achievement Test scores of twenty seven children in grades one through five A questionnaire that asked questions about the child s behavior prior to learning to read and the child s current behavior after learning to read was completed by the parent of each child involved The results of the study indicate that parental involvement in reading plays a role in the child s opinion of reading as well as the child s reading score

Parental Involvement in Childhood Education Garry Hornby,2011-04-07 Parental participation has long been recognized as a positive factor in children s education Research consistently shows that parents contributions to their children s education lead to improvements in their academic and behavioral outcomes from elementary through middle and secondary school Recognizing the critical role of school psychologists in this equation Parental Involvement in Childhood Education clearly sets out an evidence based rationale and blueprint for building parental involvement and faculty awareness The author s starting point is the gap between the ideals found in the literature and the reality of parental involvement in schools An ecological analysis identifies professional institutional and societal factors that keep schools and parents distant Methods for evaluating parental involvement are detailed as is a model for developing and maintaining strong parental relationships at the instructor school and education system level with an emphasis on flexible communication and greater understanding of parents needs This empirically sound coverage offers readers A detailed understanding of obstacles to parental involvement An evidence based model for parental participation A three nation study of parental involvement practices in schools Guidelines for implementing parental involvement activities and initiatives A review of effective communication strategies with parents Analysis of key interpersonal skills for effective work with parents Parental Involvement in Childhood Education is essential reading for practitioners and researchers in school psychology and counseling social work and educational psychology whether they work directly with schools or in providing training for teachers and other professionals who work with children and their parents Literacy, Home and School Peter Hannon University of Sheffield.,2013-10-14 Parental involvement in the teaching of reading and writing has often lagged behind practice though schools in many countries now recognise the importance of parental involvement The ideas presented in this book offer new ways of thinking about parental involvement and should interest both researchers and practitioners It relates the recent growth of involvement to broader considerations of the nature of literacy and historical exclusion of parents from the curriculum Descriptions are given of key findings from research into pre school literacy work with parents and parents hearing children read and a framework to underpin practice is offered The author gives a critique of evaluation methods in the field and suggests how parental involvement should be evaluated together with a view of research findings to date and issues needing further study The book concludes with an appraisal of what was learned from research and what needs further enquiry The Relationship Between Parental Involvement and Children's Reading Achievement Heidi J. Verschay,2000 Parental Involvement in Children's Reading B. Stierer,1986 The Effect of Parental Involvement on Children's Reading Achievement Judy Crosby,1984 Parent Involvement in Child's Reading Acquisition National Center for Family Literacy,Donna Elder,2013-10-04 Parent Involvement in Children s Reading Acquisition in the Elementary School Parents can impact their children s reading achievement How can parents best support their children s acquisition of reading and what can educators do to increase parent involvement in ways that promote children s reading success Participants will learn about the research that reinforces this claim and explore techniques and methods for supporting parents that help their kindergarten to grade 3 children learn to read Parental Involvement in Children's Reading Edna Patrice Carroll,Valdosta State University. Department of Middle Grades Education,1997 Parental Involvement in Children's Reading Success Terry Regina Jordan Pizinger,1981 The Effect of Parental Involvement on Children's Reading Achievement Scores Elizabeth Van Acker,1987 A Study of Parental Involvement in Children's Reading Development Mary Tranberg,1987 Need to Read Gerard Higgins,Lothian (Scotland). Department of Education,1996 Parent Involvement In Their Children's Reading Hyosun Park,2016 This pilot study investigated parent involvement in their children s reading comparing a Korean and an American Family as revealed through home parent child reading habits This study focused on parents reading experiences during their childhood and how it affected the way they read to their children in order to closely observe cultural differences The principal investigator examined the following two research questions 1 What are the differences between Korean and American parents childhood experiences and how it influences their children s reading practices 2 What are the differences between Korean and American parent child reading interactions

Participants were a pair of Korean parents and a pair of American parents The Korean mother was the principal investigator in this study Each family had a 7 year old girl In order to collect data the parents were asked to record their reading habits with their 7 year old daughter for three weeks in the Parents Weekly Journal They also participated in an open ended interview and filled out a survey The findings indicated that the four parents had different childhood reading experiences and different attitudes toward children s reading habits This study found that the cultural differences gender home literacy environment and parents attitude toward their child s reading had a great impact on forming children s reading habits In addition involving parents in children s reading was beneficial not only for children but also for parents In terms of immigrant children s reading habits parents involvement and roles played a more significant role for both their children and the immigrant parents than the American family

An Investigative Report of how Parental Involvement May Affect Beginning Reading Achievement and Future Success Kathleen A. Sarnik,1992 The Impact of Parent Involvement on Children's Reading Achievement and Effective Methods of Increasing Parent Involvement Amy McMahon,2010

Parental Involvement in Reading Priscilla Neri,2007 Some children succeed in school while other children struggle One important skill in succeeding in school is reading Some children come to school with early literacy skills and a few already know how to read Other children cannot seem to grasp early literacy skills and struggle when it comes to reading The purpose of this study is to find out if a correlation exists between a first grader s reading level and the amount of time parents are involved with their child in literacy activities at home Data will be collected from a first grade classroom Children will be assessed at the beginning of first grade and at the end of the eight week study to find out their fluency reading level using Houghton Mifflin fluency assessments Parents will record the amount of time they spend reading and discussing literature with their child The results of this study will show whether a correlation exist between a child s reading level and the amount of time parents and children spend together in literature at home If a correlation exists this study could be used to encourage parents to spend more time with literature in the home to improve a child s fluency level It will also encourage teachers to encourage parents to become more involved at home Keywords Parental Involvement Reading Fluency First Grade Literacy
