Stepping-stones to improve upon functioning of participatory agricultural extension programs Prossy

Isubikalu, 2023-08-28 The Farmer Field School FFS originated in the 1980s in the context of integrated pest management in Indonesian rice farming With the hope that it is the remedy for agricultural extension system FFS has been promoted as a tool for participatory learning and experimentation all over the world This work results from a critical analysis of the introduction of the FFS concept into the agricultural innovation system in Uganda Ideally an FFS produces new technical knowledge in the context of application through the input of local human resources The analysis framed as a technography shows that implementation and operation of an FFS is hugely complex This detailed study of institutional factors from the level of international donor organizations down to the level of local leadership and gender relations and analysis of technical factors in different rural areas of Uganda makes clear that and FFS is more than a local tool for farmer participation in agricultural improvement Implementation of a FFS requires adjustment of the agricultural innovation system at all levels and an integrated tackling of agricultural problems in order to meet its objectives Isubikalu shows that it is imperative to demolish existing organizational structures and create new ones which align scientific with local structures to produce an appropriate people centered system that is more responsive to agricultural and rural development She provides stepping stones in redesigning FFS to fit the specific conditions in Uganda

Diffusion of Information in Agriculture in Senegal Rudolf Witt, 2008-03 Diploma Thesis from the year 2005 in the subject Economics Case Scenarios grade 1 3 University of Hannover Institut für Entwicklungs und Agrarökonomik language English abstract Using participatory training approaches such as farmer field schools FFS is perceived to be an appropriate technique to improve farmers knowledge of complex agro ecological systems and Integrated Production and Pest Management IPPM technologies However the FFS approach appears to be more costly than alternative less intensive approaches of knowledge transfer High per capita expenditures are more justified if knowledge can be disseminated through informal farmer to farmer interactions Participatory extension approaches therefore rely on interpersonal channels and group mechanisms for diffusing greater awareness and facilitating learning among the group of untrained farmers Although diffusion is not an explicit goal of the FFS approach it is nevertheless a desired side effect which could invalidate the reproach of fiscal unsustainability Several empirical studies found that knowledge generated by participatory extension training does not always sufficiently diffuse to non participating farmers because of the complexity of knowledge imparted in the course of a FFS Farmers nevertheless exchange their experiences with each other and thus information about IPPM is being disseminated in the villages This diffusion of information can have a significant impact on adoption behavior and be an important factor for a successful introduction and establishment of an innovation like IPPM This case study conducted in the Region de Niayes in Senegal in 2004 investigates the effects of training intensity on the diffusion of information The objective of the study was to identify the factors determining the intensity of information diffusion A set of predominantly closed questions was used to generate data on demographic farm IPPM and information related issues which      Analytical Abstracts on Farmer Participatory Research Kojo Amanor,1990      Participatory Extension Peter Schmidt,Christine Etienne,Maja Hürlimann,1998 An exploration into the concepts of participation with suggestions on how participation in agricultural extension can be applied      Livestock Production Extension J. Additionally, many universities and educational institutions have their own digital libraries that provide free access to PDF books and manuals. These libraries often offer academic texts, research papers, and technical manuals, making them invaluable resources for students and researchers. Some notable examples include MIT OpenCourseWare, which offers free access to course materials from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, and the Digital Public Library of America, which provides a vast collection of digitized books and historical documents.
