Partners In Space Us Russian Cooperation After The Cold War:

Partners in Space Susan Eisenhower, 2004-01-01 Partners in Space explores the lessons learned by the United States during the International Space Station program. By tracing the diplomatic, economic and commercial origins of the US-Russian partnership, it tells the story of how the world's two greatest space powers overcame their Cold War rivalry to construct humanity's greatest engineering achievement. U. S.-Russian : cooperation in space, 1995 The recent broad political rapprochement between the United States and the nations of the Former Soviet Union (FSU) has transformed the environment for cooperation on space projects and led to cooperative programs in space with Russia and other FSU states that would have been unimaginable just a few years ago. Chief among these are the high profile human spaceflight cooperative activities involving the Space Shuttle, Space Station Mir dockings and the International Space Station. This report surveys the potential benefits and drawbacks of expanded cooperation with Russia and other nations of the FSU in space activities and examines the impacts of closer cooperation on US industry and US national security concerns. Such cooperation has begun to yield scientific, technological, political and economic benefits to the United States. However, the political and economic risks of cooperating with the Russians are higher than with the United States' traditional partners in space. Cooperation in robotic space science and earth remote sensing is proceeding well within the stringent limits of current Russian and US space budgets. Including Russia in the International Space Station program provides technical and political benefits to the space station partners but placing the Russian contribution in the critical path to completion also poses programmatic and political risks. This was the key question discussed from many viewpoints: technical, entrepreneurial, governmental, legal, at the seventh Annual Symposium held in Strasbourg, France, early in June 2002. Many ideas on the whys and the hows of our future exploration of the final frontier were put forward in a stimulating environment. The unique perspective of the International Space University (ISU) namely an interdisciplinary, international and intercultural perspective, enhanced both the presentations and the discussions. More than 150 people attended the Symposium, including the current members of the Master of Space Studies class who are attending an 11 month course at ISU. They are young professionals and postgraduate students who develop in depth some part of the broad Symposium theme in their parallel Team Projects. Their final reports
