Managing New Developments In The Gulf:

Globalization and the Middle East Toby Dodge, Richard A. Higgott, 2002 The subject of globalization has come to dominate informed debate across a broad sweep of disciplines. But there are few good, detailed published studies on the influence of globalization on non-European areas of the world. This study aims to fill the gap by bringing together a number of experts on the Middle East to examine the dynamic changes it has brought to the region. The book examines the place globalization occupies in the history of the Middle East and how it is set to transform relations between governments in the area and the external and former colonial powers. It focuses on the political, cultural and economic effects of globalization on the states of the Gulf before applying each of these three themes to the wider Middle East.

Managing New Developments in the Gulf Rosemary Hollis, 2000 The global energy sector may be more subject to market forces than it used to be but management is still required in the interests of both producers and consumers. Market management is not easy however in unstable regions such as the Middle East. In the name of protecting the free flow of oil the United States is now so entrenched in the security arrangements of the Gulf that it has become as much a local as an external actor and is likely to remain so as long as Iraq is considered a threat. In fact Iraq is a regional security emergency waiting to happen while in Iran and the GCC states the real preoccupations are internal socio-economic imperatives. This book, the latest in a series of publications produced in association with the Research and Studies Division of the Crown Prince Court in Abu Dhabi, gives a sharp depiction of how regional political dynamics are determining the energy scene in the Gulf. Published in association with the Division of Research and Studies, Crown Prince Court of Abu Dhabi.

ECKM2014-Proceedings of the 15th European conference on Knowledge Management Carla Vivas, 2014-10-01 The world economy in which we are living poses challenges that lead to a realization that more of the same will be difficult to sustain. This provides an illustration that in order to create new or modified knowledge practices strengthen customer relationships and thus positively influence customer satisfaction organizations must be flexible in configuring combining knowledge and knowledge structures in a way that is appropriate for delivering value to the customer. It must simultaneously develop effective strategies for updating the knowledge of its staff members necessary for underpinning the creation and delivery of appropriate knowledge services. Thus unlearning, forgetting becomes a critical means for organizational success. The ECKM community of scholars has already initiated dialogue that links its particular strengths to innovation issues. This conference aims to further that dialogue by attracting leading edge work that leverages the ECKM community's in depth understanding of learning and unlearning to better understand knowledge management. Our aim is to stimulate breakthrough research streams linking learning, unlearning and knowledge management. How can organizations tailor use and extend techniques and tools from knowledge management for improving their business practices and processes? Building upon existing work on knowledge management, KM and organizational learning, the conference will promote interdisciplinary approaches from computer science and information systems, business management and organization science as well as cognitive science. Emphasis will be put on systematic learning from experience, KM tools and KM success factors. A special interest belongs to knowledge management initiatives which are lightweight, i.e. do not place considerable additional burden on users and KM experts; allow an incremental adoption, i.e. do not require large up front investment before any return of investment is at least visible and are flexible regarding frequent changes in experts and topics. Continuing the success of the ECKM conference series since 2000, the 2015 conference will provide an international communication forum bringing together academia and industry for discussing the progress made and addressing the challenges faced by continuous learning in knowledge intensive organizations.
