Pam J. Crabtree

Middle Saxon London:

Early and Middle Saxon Rural Settlement in the London Region Robert Cowie,Lyn Blackmore,2008 Until now the evidence for London s Early and Middle Saxon rural settlement and economy has received scant attention This monograph provides a long awaited overview of the subject drawing on the results of six decades of archaeological fieldwork since the war in addition to historical and place name evidence Some of the material has been published before and will be familiar to the reader but much of it has only been available as site archives or unpublished reports and at best briefly summarised as notes in excavation round ups This synthesis therefore forms an indispensable guide to researchers The first part focuses on twenty six sites and six fish traps across the region followed by thematic sections on a range of topics and then a final section on the pottery finds

Middle Saxon London Gordon Malcolm,David Bowsher,Robert Cowie,2003 The Royal Opera House is located on the north side of Covent Garden London in the heart of what was the Middle Saxon settlement of Lundenwic This settlement was a flourishing centre for trade and manufacture from the 7th to 9th centuries Urban redevelopment in 1996 included the largest excavation yet undertaken in the area providing a wealth of information about the settlement its inhabitants their work and daily lives This well illustrated publication reports on the results of the excavations describes a sequence of occupation and considers more general themes such as the relationship of the Middle Saxon settlement to Roman Londinium Saxon crafts and industry the agricultural economy trade and demography The discoveries included an 8th century street plan specialised industrial buildings rubbish and debris from a jewellery workshop evidence of ironworking and most importantly a 9th century defensive ditch with a hoard of Northumbrian stycas buried in its berm The ditch was probably a response to Viking attack but failed to prevent the Viking occupation of Lundenwic in 871 The book also looks at the medieval and post medieval development of the area and numerous brief specialist reports on the finds and environmental remains

Lundenwic Robert Cowie,Lyn Blackmore,Anne Davis,Jackie Keily,Kevin Rielly,2012 This study provides archaeological evidence for the trading port of 7th century London placing it in its regional national and international context Fieldwork results are followed by essays on various aspects of the settlement and finds assemblages and the book also includes a sites gazeteer and a timeline

Citadel of the Saxons Rory Naismith,2018-11-29 With a past as deep and sinewy as the famous River Thames that twists like an eel around the jutting peninsula of Mudchute and the Isle of Dogs London is one of the world s greatest and most resilient cities Born beside the sludge and the silt of the meandering waterway that has always been its lifeblood it has weathered invasion flood abandonment fire and bombing The modern story of London is well known Much has been written about the later history of this megalopolis which like a seductive dark star has drawn incomers perpetually into its orbit Yet as Rory Naismith reveals in his zesty evocation of the nascent medieval city much less has been said about how close it came to earlier obliteration Following the collapse of Roman civilization in fifth century Britannia darkness fell over the former province Villas crumbled to ruin vital commodities became scarce cities decayed and Londinium the capital was all but abandoned Yet despite its demise as a living city memories of its greatness endured like the moss and bindweed which now ensnared its toppled columns and pilasters By the 600s a new settlement Lundenwic was established on the banks of the River Thames by enterprising traders who braved the North Sea in their precarious small boats The history of the city's phoenix like resurrection as it was transformed from an empty shell into a court of kings and favoured setting for church councils from across the land is still virtually unknown The author here vividly evokes the forgotten Lundenwic and the later fortress on the Thames Lundenburgh of desperate Anglo Saxon defenders who retreated inside their Roman walls to stand fast against menacing Viking incursions Recalling the lost cities which laid the foundations of today's great capital this book tells the stirring story of how dead Londinium was reborn against the odds as a bulwark against the Danes and a pivotal English citadel It recounts how Anglo Saxon London survived to become the most important town in England and a vital stronghold in later campaigns against the Normans in 1066 Revealing the remarkable extent to which London was at the centre of things from the very beginning this volume at last gives the vibrant early medieval city its due Lundenwic Robert Cowie, 1989 Early Medieval Britain Pam J. Crabtree, 2018-06-07 Traces the development of towns in Britain from late Roman times to the end of the Anglo Saxon period using archaeological data

Saxon London A. G. Vince, 1990 The Craft of Antler, Bone, Horn and Ivory Working in the Early Medieval Emporia c. AD 600-850 Ian Riddler, Nicola Trzaska-Nartowski, 2025-11-13 This book offers an in depth exploration of the craft of antler bone horn and ivory working as it evolved within the pre Viking emporia of northern Europe Over the past few decades studies of early medieval European trading settlements known as emporia have steadily shifted in focus from an emphasis on trade towards an appreciation of the role they played in craft production This volume highlights one of the most conspicuous crafts to emerge in the pre Viking emporia of northern Europe the working of antler bone horn and ivory and explores how and to what degree its development through the Merovingian and Carolingian dynasties influenced its later proliferation in significant Viking sites of the 9th and 10th centuries Waste materials and surviving evidence of production at most of the emporia including both unfinished pieces and finished objects can not only reveal the locations of workshops but also allow for an estimate of the duration and scale of production As the range of products created shifts over time so too do the raw materials with the use of antler bone and horn oscillating across phases and exotic materials like whale bone and ivory being introduced into the mix Through detailed analysis of a rich array of evidence across sites and regions this study sheds new light on a wide range of questions from the mechanisms behind the changes in production and the nature of human animal interaction within the emporia to the influence of the church on the craft from the late 7th century onwards and the status of its practitioners as either sedentary or itinerant full time or part time By looking outwards from northern Europe to the surrounding areas of Frisia Anglo Saxon England and the Insular world it offers an expansive overview of the evolution of antler bone horn and ivory working during this transitional period of history and re evaluates the important role of the Franks in establishing what is often viewed as a Viking craft and way of life Tatberht's Lundewic Jim Leary, Gary Brown,2004 During excavations at the National Portrait Gallery in London a sheep bone was found inscribed with the name Tatberht This man may well have lived in a house at this location sometime during the 8th and 9th centuries This well presented study aims to reconstruct the London or Lundewic that Tatberht and his contemporaries would have known by focusing on the evidence produced during four major excavations at 28 31 James Street at the Lyceum Theatre in Exeter Street at the National Portrait Gallery Maiden Lane and Exchange Court Jim Leary with contributors presents the evidence from each site in turn looking at the archaeological sequence in each area and the type of finds such as pottery loomweights slag metalwork environmental remains human bone and the occasional coin as well as a group of charred honeybees One technical chapter by Richard Hughes looks in detail at the wattle and daub remains from the National Portrait Gallery This evidence is then discussed in a synthetic discussion in which Jim Leary considers the evolving shape its industry animals and daily life of Tatberht's Middle Saxon London Highly recommended Alfred the Great Timothy Reuter,2017-05-15 1999 marked the eleven hundredth anniversary of the death of Alfred the Great and to mark this event two international conferences were held to re evaluate and contextualise Alfred's achievements and the developments of his reign This volume includes papers given at both events and provides substantial assessments by leading scholars of issues of source criticism of the large corpus of Old English literature associated with Alfred and of developments in government and society in late ninth century England It also explores how Alfred and his kingdom related to the wider geo political and cultural situation in the British isles and continental Europe and closes with a substantial survey of the uses and shifts in Alfred's reputation in the centuries following his death This substantial and wide ranging volume will become a standard reference work for anyone interested in Old English literature or Anglo Saxon history and will set the pattern of future scholarly debate The London Archaeologist ,2002

Producers, Traders and Consumers in Urban Societies in Southern Britain and Europe Mark Maltby,Deborah Hodges,2025-03-13 Papers honor Mark's research on urbanization and trade in Britain and Europe and his contributions to museums and museology In two sections the first provides up to date reviews of Hamwic Saxon Southampton and the second offers post excavation studies in Britain and Europe and also includes developments in the Museum and Heritage sectors London Archaeologist ,1984 The Building of London John Schofield,1999 What did the medieval and Tudor city of London look like How did it grow from its Roman and Saxon origins to a European metropolis This is a detailed account of the evolution of Britain's capital up to the Great Fire of 1666 Although the city was virtually destroyed a few medieval buildings such as the Guildhall remain More evidence survives in legal documents maps and plans and antiquarian drawings There are also new discoveries of urban archaeology in which the author and his colleagues at the Museum of London have played a major part Saxon London A. G. Vince,1990 Transactions of the London and Middlesex Archaeological Society London and Middlesex Archaeological Society,1905 Contains its Proceedings Reports

List of members etc Towns in Decline, AD100–1600 Terry Slater, 2017-07-05 Many European towns have experienced loss of population degradation of physical structure and profound economic change at least once since the height of the Roman Empire This volume is an examination of the various causes of these changes the results which flowed from them and the reasons why some urban centres survived revived and eventually flourished again while others failed and died The contributors bring to bear the techniques of history and archaeology the perspectives of economics agronomy medicine architecture and planning geography and law to the study The result is a synthesis which connects the Decline of the Roman Empire to the effects of the Black Death and the economic transformation of Renaissance Florence Britain in the Middle Ages Francis Pryor, 2007 A fresh and lively look at medieval Britain which draws on startling new archaeological discoveries to prompt a radical revision in our understanding of one of Britain's most fascinating historical periods back cover

London Before the Conquest William Richard Lethaby, 1902 The Archaeology of Greater London Trevor Brigham, 2000 It is nearly 25 years since the last major survey of the archaeology of the London region was written In that quarter century some of the most extraordinary evidence of our past has come to light a 9 000 year old hunting camp in Uxbridge a 2 mile long prehistoric bank and ditch cursus monument at Stanwell the spectacular Roman heart of the City the Saxon trading emporium on the Strand the largest medieval cemetery excavated in Europe at Spitalfields and Shakespeare's Rose Theatre at Bankside This book completed with the substantial support of English Heritage and the City of London Archaeological Trust represents the latest and most comprehensive attempt to place these treasures in their context It also draws together the knowledge of specialists and experts to provide a framework within which future archaeological discoveries and research may be considered The result is an accessible and fascinating insight into the rich diversity of human experience that has combined over the last half million years into the metropolis of Greater London today The Archaeology of Greater London is presented in 10 period based chapters with 13 accompanying full colour maps and an extensive bibliography and gazetteer of sites end finds
