economic historical political and social can support or undermine children s pathways and how children s own actions and the actions of those around them shape these pathways With a focus on demographic changes taking place in the U S the volume also maps how experiences of diversity reflecting culture ethnicity gender and social class matter for children s life contexts and options Chapters by a team of social scientists in the MacArthur Foundation Research Network on Successful Pathways through Middle Childhood present the fruits of ten years of research on these issues with diverse cultural and ethnic communities across the U S These include a set of models and measures that trace how contexts and diversity evolve and interact over time with an epilogue that aligns and compares them surprising new findings quantitative and qualitative with cases showing how children and families shape and are affected by their individual recreational institutional and cultural experiences and applications to policy and practice for diverse children and families The importance of these new models methods findings and applications is the topic of commentaries by distinguished scholars with both U S and international perspectives The book is intended for researchers practitioners and policy makers as well as students in psychology sociology and education

Childhood Marsha D. Walton, Alice J. Davidson, 2017-03-27 Conflict Narratives in Middle Childhood presents evidence from twenty years of research examining nearly 3 000 narratives from 1 600 children in eight settings in two countries about their own experiences with interpersonal conflict. Close readings combined with systematic analysis of dozens of features of the stories reveal that when children are invited to write or talk about their own conflicts they produce accounts that are often charming and sometimes heartbreaking and that always bring to light their social, emotional and moral development. Children's personal stories about conflict reveal how they create and maintain friendships, how they understand and react to the social aggression that threatens those friendships, and how they understand and cope with physical aggression ranging from the pushing and poking of peers to criminal violence in their neighborhoods or families. Sometimes children describe the efforts of adults to influence their conflicts; efforts they sometimes welcome and sometimes resist. Their stories show them taking on gender and other cultural commitments. We are not just watching children become more and more like us as they move through the elementary school years; we are watching them become the architects of a future we will only see to the extent that we understand their way of making sense.      Development Contexts in Middle Childhood Aletha C.
