Migration and Brain Drain Reidar Oderth,2002    Emigration, Brain Drain and Development Arno Tanner,2005 What happens to the health care system in Malawi when a large portion of Malawian physicians immigrate to Britain Does the migration of highly skilled professionals from developing and underdeveloped countries to developed countries harm or hurt their country of origin In Emigration Brain Drain and Development The Case of Sub Saharan Africa Arno Tanner questions the emerging literature that stresses the positive aspects of labor migration He finds that while emigration certainly cannot be stopped and may be beneficial in some cases unhindered high skilled emigration particularly in the case of sub Saharan Africa can have disastrous consequences In examining the cases of Malawi Tanzania and Zimbabwe Tanner finds striking trends For instance the outflow of physicians from Malawi may severely hurt AIDS prevention Furthermore sub Saharan Africans tend not to return remittances are erratic have dwindled over time and do not offset the costs of emigration Tanner recommends specific policies where carefully targeted development measures could be used to mitigate the negative consequences of brain drain

Transnational Social Protection Peggy Levitt,Erica Dobbs,Ken Chih-Yan Sun,Ruxandra Paul,2023 Argues that a new set of transnational social welfare arrangements has emerged that challenge traditional social welfare provision based on national citizenship and residence The idea that social rights are something we are eligible for based on where we live or where we are citizens is out of date In Transnational Social Protection Peggy Levitt Erica Dobbs Ken Chih Yan Sun and Ruxandra Paul consider what happens to social welfare when more and more people live work study and retire outside their countries of citizenship where they receive health education and elder care The authors use the concept of resource environment to show how migrants and their families piece together packages of protections from multiple sources in multiple settings and the ways that these vary by place and time They further show how a new hybrid transnational social protection regime has emerged in response to the changing environment that complements supplements or in some cases substitutes for national social welfare systems as we knew them Examining how national social welfare is affected when migration and mobility become an integral part of everyday life this book moves our understanding of social protection from the national to the transnational

David,2009-01-01 HIV AIDS reverses life expectancy gains erodes productivity consumes savings and dilutes growth efforts threatening the realization of the Millennium Development Goals MDGs in Africa The report is the result of an extensive analytical and consultative process begun in 2006 that engaged more than 1 000 people from over 30 countries and many institutions mostly in Africa as well as UN agencies multilateral and bilateral donors and foundations The report reaffirms the Bank s commitment to combating HIV AIDS in Africa moving from its initial emergency response to the next phase including the goal to provide at least US 250 million annually and to create an Africa HIV AIDS Incentive Fund to enhance the evidence base promote the multisectoral response and provide technical support analysis and policy advice to countries      Migration and Development Asmita Naik,Jobst Koehler,International Organization for Migration,2008 Policy coherence between migration and development agendas is of increasing interest in current times there is growing recognition that migration policies should support rather than hinder investment in international development The United Nations High Level Dialogue of September 2006 and the Global Forum on Migration and Development of July 2007 both raised the attention given to this issue Now that the interface between migration and development has been recognized the challenge is to turn this interest into working level policies and programmes The aim of this study is to build on existing international research and take the analysis to the next higher level showing how these connections can be made in practice Policy makers often focus on remittances as the main means of translating the migration development nexus into reality However this paper shows that there are many stages in the migration cycle from departure to return and reintegration back home that present opportunities to make migration more development friendly and conversely to raise development awareness of migration factors
