Soils in a Changing World Jorge Mataix-Solera, Diana Vieira, Nicasio Jiménez-Morillo, Xavier Úbeda, 2024-11-01 Fire is a natural ecological process that shapes many ecosystems however the distortion of the natural fire regimes can provoke significant additional impacts Land use changes in the last decades driven by human activity and changes in climate due to global warming have led to projections of increased fire recurrence and corresponding socioeconomic and environmental impacts During the last decades an impressive bulk of research has been produced addressing fire impacts on soils but the most recent shifts indicate more severe wildfires as well as novel occurrences in non fire prone areas which are less adapted and more vulnerable to this perturbation highlights the need of translating the current knowledge to other conditions FuegoRED is a research network created in 2007 aiming for a more direct knowledge transfer between scientists and society The X FuegoRED 2022 International Congress was held in vora Portugal in October 2022 This Special Issue targeted this specific FuegoRED event but was open to additional research contributions on the effect of fires on the soil system and post fire management The Spanish Journal of Soil Science Impact Factor of 2 0 and Citescore of 2 2 has now launched a new Special Issue to mark the XI FuegoRED 2024 International Congress Environmental Impacts of Fire on Forest Ecosystems Across the Globe

Behavioural Responses to a Changing World Bob B. M. Wong, Ulrika Candolin, 2025-04-23 For many animals behavioural adjustments represent the first response to human modified conditions By improving reproduction and survival such adjustments can play the lead in maintaining viable populations in the face of rapid environmental change Behavioural responses however can also be maladaptive and reduce individual fitness particularly if favourable reaction norms have not yet evolved because animals are encountering conditions that they have never experienced before Clearly behaviour matters But how can we capitalise on our understanding of animal behaviour to improve conservation and management outcomes Behavioural Responses to a Changing World Challenges and Applications a companion volume to the first edition published in 2012 examines wildlife behavioural responses to human induced environmental change through a translational lens Despite considerable and growing interest in research on the topic the predictive value and practical application of what has been learned remains underappreciated and underutilized in the context of developing real world solutions To redress this the current book builds upon the foundations of the original volume but with a more applied perspective that focuses on highlighting how different forms of environmental challenges from climate change to urbanisation influence animal behaviour and how we can effectively harness knowledge of animal behaviour to effect practical solutions to predicting and mitigating the weighty impacts of a radically changed and changing world

Plant Ecology in a Changing World James R. Ehleringer, Russell K. Monson, 2025-06-30 Today global changes and human activities affect plants within each of the world's ecosystems Plant Ecology in a Changing World provides a foundation for understanding how the changes underway impact structure and function in the world's major biomes while also describing how evolution has resulted in the biochemical physiological structural and life history features that shaped plants and their capacities to persist across widely contrasting environments This textbook is designed for undergraduate students and graduate students as well to serve as a resource for climate change and ecosystem scientists seeking a foundation on the principles of plant ecology and the basis of plant adaptations While many textbooks focus primarily on natural ecosystems Plant Ecology in a Changing World also recognizes the ecological importance of invasive managed and urban ecosystems and of the ways in which ecosystems are already being impacted by both human activities and a warming planet Key features

Sustainable Forest Management in a Changing World: a European Perspective Peter Spathelf, 2009-12-04 Yet another book on the topic of Sustainable Forest Management can only be justified by new information that is of direct relevance The contents of this volume concentrate on the very latest factors and developments thus hopefully contributing both to the book's attractiveness and to closing gaps in the discipline's database This book is written for researchers in the field of forest management international forestry and climate change related issues legal and policy advisors as well as for managers of private companies who deal with SFM The authors of the various sections are scientists in the field of forestry and other environmental sciences They represent different institutions mainly universities and research agencies in Germany but also high level international institutions in development co operation such as the World Bank FAO and IIASA The scope of the book is to refresh the meanings and perceptions of SFM against the background of the rapid changes in our natural and social environment Climate change and the rapid increase of atmospheric CO concentration is a global process 2 with negative impacts of different kinds among others on natural ecosystems such as forests A crucial issue therefore is how forest management can contribute to forest conservation in light of changing climatic conditions Moreover policy changes such as the introduction of certification schemes and the new emphasis laid on Non Wood Forest Products justify the re evaluation of the role of SFM in delivering ecological goods and services from our forests
