Working in Conflict - Working on Conflict Pat Gibbons, Brigitte Piquard, 2006-01-01 The intensification and multiplicity of protracted conflicts the blurring of traditional distinctions between war zones and safe areas together with increased difficulties in distinguishing between belligerents and civilian population have all served to worsen the fate of innocent victims and to complicate the work of those who try to assist them. Actors who claim space under the humanitarian banner are guided by varying principles of humanitarianism or employ different interpretations of a small number of acknowledged humanitarian principles. This book addresses some of the main challenges and dilemmas of contemporary humanitarian work. It presents a selection of papers from a high level forum that the Network on Humanitarian Assistance NOHA convened in 2003 as an introductory course to its Joint European Master's in International Humanitarian Action. The event gathered over two hundred participants including researchers, policy makers, practitioners and postgraduate students from around the world. The first section of the book explores the meaning of the humanitarian concept. The second analyses the evolving mandates of humanitarian actors under a number of broad groupings and finally the third examines the scope of the humanitarian business and the relationship between humanitarian action and conflict transformation hence the title working in conflict working on conflict

The subject of conflict is gaining more interest among stakeholders in all spheres of life. There's been various perspectives owing to the roles often played by conflicts at the national and international levels. The focus of this work however is limited to conflicts within an organization specifically the healthcare organization in Nigeria. Team development has been studied and characterized by organizational theorists and administrators as it concerns organizational performance. In the healthcare setting maintaining highly functional teams has been advocated for many reasons including a the prevention of avoidable adverse events partly due to inadequacy of communication channels among clinicians b The avoidance of unnecessary waste and cost due to a lack of clarity in purpose c Decreasing the risk of medical errors as a result of the incompetence among the team of healthcare professionals In the Nigerian context experts have also identified some barriers to effective team development The Nigerian healthcare sector has perennially suffered from the outcomes of conflicts among various stakeholders that make up the overall healthcare system In view of these negative consequences of such conflicts for example industrial action leading to termination of healthcare services every year there s been a rise in the phenomenon of medical tourism among certain privileged segments of the Nigerian society leaving the majority of the population vulnerable
