Older Woman:

The Older Woman in Recent Fiction Zoe Brennan, 2014-12-09 This critical study explores late twentieth century novels by women writers including Doris Lessing May Sarton and Barbara Pym that feature female protagonists over the age of sixty. These novels discourses on aging contrast with those largely pejorative ones that dominate Western society. They break the silence that normally surrounds the lives of the aged and this book investigates how older female protagonists are represented in relation to areas such as sexuality dependence and everyday life. Beginning with an investigation of popular opinions about aging and a survey of hypotheses from disciplines including gerontology psychology and feminism the text reviews literary critical attitudes toward fictions of aging analyzes representations of physically dependent characters whose anger over their failing bodies is often eased by relationships with their female friends discusses how paradigms of female sexuality exclude the possibility of older women being sexually desirable examines characters that live a contented life finding a more polemical side to them than is noted in more conventional literary critiques and analyzes the aged sleuth in classical detective fiction.

Being an Older Woman Isabella Paoletti, 1998 In Being an Older Woman A Study in the Social Production of Identity Isabella Paoletti examines how older women's identities are socially constructed and in particular how they can be influenced by institutional intervention. The interest in identity production is not only theoretical but also practical. Different perceptions of oneself as an older woman involve considerable differences in the definition of the person's possible sphere of action and therefore in her life perspective. Based on the experiences of Italian women who participated in the European Older Women's Project this study explores how gender and age identities are interactionally constructed in specific institutional contexts. Being an Older Woman describes the discourse and social practices that constitute older women's identities helping to identify and deconstruct those stereotypes that tend to produce marginalization of older people. As a resource for scholars in discourse gender studies aging and gerontology this volume gives new perspectives on the construction of perceptions of older women as well as contributing images of them as active lively and appealing human beings. The Older Woman Marie Marschall Fuller, Cora Ann Martin, 1980 Summary Describes the energy crisis its link to the gross national product and alternatives for current and future fuel resources. Rape and
